FOLLIES GIRL DRIVES AUTO OVER CLIFF

Wife of Wealthy Broker Dies in Riviera Plunge; Once Wed to Pittsburgher

NICE, March 30.—(AP.)—Her nerve bolstered by four stiff brandies, Mrs. David Townsend, former Broadway "Follies" girl, drove her car off a 200-foot precipice near here and found in death the rest that life denied her.

While she drank she scribbled a note to her husband, reputedly wealthy Wall street broker, which read:

"Please take care of my mother. Pay 4,000 francs to Wally."

WED PITTSBURGHER

Known on the stage as Peggy Davis, Mrs. Townsend had been married twice before, and both marriages were annuled. At the age of 12 or 14, she was first wed to Lieut. Col. Joseph Alexander Davies, who afterward proved to have been married and not divorced. In 1921 she married Joseph Donald Grafton, who represented himself as a Pittsburgh millionaire, but who was indicted for bigamy a year later.

When Mrs. Townsend did not show up Saturday evening for an opera party which she had planned for friends, they sought her, but their search was unavailing until in the cold gray dawn of Sunday morning police saw her car crushed on the rocks below one of the sharpest precipices on the Riviera, playhouse of Europe.

APPEARED HAPPY

Mrs. Townsend left her family at the villa Saturday morning and drove to Nice and from there to Monte Carlo alone. Friends who saw her thought she was most happy and cheerful and she is said to have commented that she wished to get back to attend an opera party.

At 10 p. m. she halted her car before a golf hotel at Eze and de-

Tammany's Quiz Of Self Reveals One Republican

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

They're shaking all the tree-sitters out of the old poisoned oak.

Now, when a political organization investigates itself you can bet it's a cat wash.

Kitty has a rough tongue. But when she curries herself she doesn't bear down very hard.

And to think that the first Democrat to get nailed was a Republican!

If Tammany is going in for

Kline's Backing May Give Soost Kambach's Seat

William J. Soost, Traffic Court magistrate and Republican city chairman, is conceded to be Mayor Charles H. Kline's choice for the vacancy caused by the death of Councilman George J. Kambach, who was buried yesterday.

The vacancy will be filled in a few days by the votes of Kline and eight members of Council. The term will expire next January and the person selected now, if he seeks a full term, will have to go before the people at the primary next September and if nominated, run in the November election.

Kambach was filling the unexpired term of the late Controller Daniel Winters, who resigned from Council late in 1929 to assume the controllership.

KLINE CHOICE SURE

Previous to Kambach's death, Soost was being groomed by the Mayor to run for Council on the administration ticket which was to include R. J. Alderdice, Kambach, Soost and P. J. O'Malley, Second Ward chairman. Soost was to be used by Kline to defeat Councilman Robert Garland and

STATE RESTS IN HYMIE'S TRIAL

Defense Prepares to Send 15 Witnesses to Stand to Clear Martin in Killing

International News Service.

CLEVELAND, March 30.—After winning its battle to present testimony showing that "Pittsburgh Hymie" Martin previously said he was in Pittsburgh on the night of February 3, the state today rested its case in Martin's murder trial for the slaying of former Councilman William E. Potter.

Then the defense prepared to send 15 witnesses to the stand in the fight to free Martin of the murder charges. Hymie was to be a witness, Attorney William Minshall announced.

ALIBI ATTACKED

Overruling defense objections, Judge Walter McMahon permitted Prosecutor Ray T. Miller to question state's witnesses about testimony presented in Martin's behalf at his Pittsburgh habeas corpus hearing February 18.

At that hearing, it was declared today, two witnesses for Martin testified that Hymie was in a Pittsburgh haberdashery store the night Potter was said to have been killed.

Marshal Foch Tells Of Desperate Battle Along Marne Front

In the opening chapter of his War Memoirs published yesterday, Marshal Foch outlined his conception of the aspiration of the German Empire for world domination in 1914, asserting that Germany could have accomplished its goal by pacific means, so great was its rate of progress.

"But," he declared, "the Berlin government, drunk with power and driven forward by the blind pan-German party, fully confident, moreover, in the superiority of its army over any other, did not hesitate to have recourse to arms . . . to hasten that domination of the world which, to its mind, was its heritage . . . Germany has become one vast Prussia and Prussia, since the earliest times, had cultivated war as a national industry."

Marshal Foch pictured France as desiring only peace and determined not to resort to force of arms, except in defense of her liberty and existence, and told of its efforts to avoid hostilities. He also analyzed the military doctrines and preparedness of France after many years of unbroken peace.

In today's installment he tells of his part in the First Battle of the Marne early in September, 1914, when he had just been assigned by Marshal Joffre to the command of the 9th French Army.

CHAPTER II.

As the days went by, I got to know my troops better. I had not been with them during the battles they had fought in Belgium, but I now began to comprehend the impression this severe experience had left on the men.

The Moroccan division (Gen. Humbert) of the 9th Corps had been engaged in violent combats for several days and had suffered heavily. It remained full of spirit, but needed reinforcement. The 17th Division (Gen. Guignabaudet) of that corps had been less tried.

The severe ordeals experienced by the 11th Corps, especially at Maissin, had left their mark on the men. Many officers had been killed, and in the Breton regiments especially, the soldiers were constantly asking for officers to be sent to lead

CITY BUYING OF COAL SIFTED

Public Works Quiz May Be Turned Over to Experts; 'Crucifixion,' English Cries

These developments today marked the progress of the public hearing of charges of inefficiency in the Department of Public Works before City Council and the dual audit of records of the Department of Supplies:

1—The appointment of a committee of competent engineers to study the facts already disclosed in the Department of Public Works hearing, was proposed, indicating an early end of the hearing of charges against the department by Henry Oliver Evans, former city controller.

2—Auditors probing the Department of Supplies turned their attention to railroad records of coal shipments to the city, following receipt of reports that coal bought for city use had been diverted to the use of city employes.

3—Councilman W. Y. English charged that John S. Herron, president of City Council, lies in his bed a "victim of character assassination." English also declared that City Council was being "crucified" because they wished to conduct the hearing in an orderly manner.

4—Introduction by Attorney Evans of "surprise evidence" in an attempt to make general his charge that many street improvements have cost the City of Pittsburgh more than $1,000,000 more than the original estimates because of "poor engineering."

5—Charles M. Reppert, chief engineer of the Works Department, assumed full responsibility for every appointment to an engineering position. He said that Mayor Charles H. Kline had honored all of his recommendations.

STUDY EVANS PLAN

While City Council did not act officially upon Evans' request for the appointment of the committee to study the facts already disclosed, before adjourning the public hearing until tomorrow morning, the matter was referred to Assistant District Attorney William H. Colvin, Attorney Lee C.

New City Supplies Head Dodges Costly Salmon

Col. W. R. Dunlap, new director of the Department of Supplies, will not buy expensive red salmon, the kind that helped to get his predecessor, Col. B. L. Succop, into trouble.

Col. Dunlap made that announcement today when it was revealed that an error in specifications sent to wholesale grocers by the Department of Supplies specified red salmon. The specifications were ordered amended to read pink salmon as soon as the error was called to Col. Dunlap's attention.

He said the apparent ignoring of Mayor Kline's ban on red salmon after the Department of Supplies had been criticized was due to the hurried revision of specifications.

Mayor Kline decreed pink salmon after food authorities pointed out that pink salmon, costing about $1.15 a dozen, had just as much food value as the red, which costs $3.25.

PRESIDENT BACK AT DESK, FACES REVENUE PROBLEM

FARM BOARD POLICIES UPHELD

Hoover Favors Short-Term Borrowing to Pay Deficit, Rather Than Boost Taxes

By GEORGE E. DURNO
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—Several highly important matters of administration and politics awaited President Hoover's attention this morning when he went back to work, ending a badly-needed 10-day vacation cruise to America's Caribbean Sea possessions aboard the battleship Arizona.

Foremost was the problem of federal finances and what is to be done about the drop in tax collections for the first period which will pull revenues more than $100,000,000 below advance estimates and $225,000,000 below collections for the same period last year.

UPHOLDS FARM BOARD

Of almost equal concern was the untenable position into which the Federal Farm Board has been forced in its efforts to stabilize prices of wheat and cotton through manipulations of surpluses.

The board's decision to stay out of the wheat pit and buy none of the 1931 crop has the complete approval of the President, it was learned. He feels, it was stated, that the Farm Board is the maker of its own policies, and that it has been clothed with enough authority by Congress to carry them out. He considered that the board has accomplished real benefits during the agricultural depression and that it has more than justified expectations, despite the criticism of its methods.

SPEAKING TOUR PROBLEM

Politically, President Hoover has before him only two weeks more in which to prepare for the first ambitious speaking program of his administration—one which starts April 14 and carries him through eight public addresses up to the middle of June, between Washington and the Central States. It is anticipated as launching his campaign for renomination. While aboard the Arizona Mr. Hoover dictated rough drafts of the first of these speeches.

The executive presented a countenance approximating the shade of an almost-ripe tomato to his office staff this morning when he returned to his desk. West Indian sun and wind had burned his face badly, and there was a strong suspicion he was going to peel.

BUSY DAY TODAY

Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, Undersecretary Mills and Director of the Budget Roop were among the most important scheduled for immediate conference.

The President has given much thought during the past few days to the prospect of a great Treasury deficit and how best to meet it. It is understood he feels that, as the government is some $3,000,000,000 ahead of schedule in retirement of the national debt, it better can be offset by borrowing on short terms than by increasing taxes, as has been suggested from some quarters.

Future status of the Farm Board promises Mr. Hoover some weighty deliberation also.

Although his contact with the outside world for the past 10 days has been confined to a 1,000-word digest of the news wirelessed daily by his new secretary, Theodore G. Joslin, the President went back to work fully aware that serious charges were being made against his agricultural agency, most of which might be expected to crop up in the next campaign.

DETAIN WOMAN IN AUTO KILLING

DETROIT, March 30.—(INS.)—Ohio authorities were to arrive in Detroit today to question Mrs. Gertrude Dwyer, 33, pretty grocery cashier, concerning the mystery slaying of Robert Stanley, 31, known to police here as a "petty racketeer."

Stanley's body, a bullet through the neck, was found in a ditch near Port Clinton, O., Saturday. A mile further down the road a blood-stained car was found. Ownership was traced to Mrs. Dwyer, who surrendered voluntarily.

No charges have been filed against the woman. Her purse was said to have been found in the death automobile.

Postpone Trials Of 8 Communists

Gang Shots Riddle Cabaret in Chicago

CHICAGO, March 30.—(AP.)—Six gangsters poured bullets into the Panama Inn, Negro cafe on the South Side, slugged one Negro, wounded another and drove away early today before detective squads arrived in response to a riot call.

A few moments later, after the police had left, the same car drove past the building again and another volley of shots was fired into the windows. Again the men escaped before the squads returned.

Quakers Protest Mock War Attack

The protest will be made in cooperation with the Pennsylvania Committee for Total Disarmament.

STATE RESTS IN HYMIE CASE

Saturday's adjournment, reviewed the habeas corpus testimony during which Lew Freschman and Bernard B. Schechter told of seeing Martin about 9 p. m. on the night of February 3, when Martin came into their store to pay a bill.

DETECTIVE STANDS PAT

During cross-examination Attorney Samuel Rosenberg, who took his first active part in Martin's case today, attempted to force Wolf to admit that he knew Martin was in an Akron hotel the night of February 3 and that he failed to bring that out at the habeas corpus hearing. The witness denied knowing about the Akron alibi until several days later.

The state rested its case without presenting any evidence aimed to connect Hymie with the Potter murder gun. Mrs. Ruth Lieberman, wife of Morris Lieberman, former city policeman, had told police she heard her husband say he sold a gun identified as the one used to kill Potter to a man named Hyman Martin.

SOOST MAY GET KAMBACH SEAT

O'Malley was expected to be the nemesis of Councilman Charles Anderson. Garland and Anderson were to be penalized for demanding an open investigation of the Department of Supplies scandal against Kline's wishes.

It is generally admitted that Kline can put over any candidate he chooses for the vacant Council berth as he has a vote himself and will get enough councilmen from the majority to vote as he commands.

A substantial number of citizens from various walks of life but untouched by political factionalism have expressed the belief that it would be a diplomatic stroke on Kline's part if he would select former Councilman P. J. McArdle for the vacant berth.

RECALL BITTER FIGHT

They pointed out that McArdle's selection might neutralize some of the criticism being heaped on the Kline administration as the former councilman has a reputation for being a keen analyst of city problems and a stickler for business-like procedure in the conduct of municipal affairs.

However, friends of the administration say Kline probably fears McArdle's independence of thought and action and has not forgotten the fight McArdle made for re-election in 1929 against Kline's campaign and the election of Kline's Councilmanic slate.

Although McArdle declines to admit it, many of his friends declare he will be a candidate for one of the four places in Council to be filled at the primary and general election this year.

If the unexpected happens and administration followers on the South Side demand the vacant place in Council, consideration may be given to T. D. Jones, chairman of the Eighteenth Ward and magistrate of Morals Court under Kline's appointment.

Friends of Fred A. Dengler, chairman of the Sixteenth Ward, have taken hope from Kline's beneficence to ward chairmen and are seeking support for Dengler for the councilmanic vacancy. Dengler is a close friend of former Mayor William A. Magee and would, no doubt, win support from the latter's former supporters.

Some of the most astute thinkers attached to the city administration profess to believe that Kline might make an attempted strategic gesture to allay criticism by selecting for the seat in Council a man not identified with practical politics.

Effort to Regain Losses Seen in Davis Trip

WASHINGTON, March 30.—Life in Washington as a cabinet member is not all "beer and skittles," but tends more to champagne and tenderloin steaks. Senator James J. Davis, of Pennsylvania, has learned, according to one of his friends here.

Entertainment and other legitimate expenses have cost the Pennsylvania Senator a million dollars in his 10 years in this city, he told this intimate. Of course part of this can be charged off as Senator Davis bought a magnificent home shortly after his arrival here, which cost not less than $100,000, and is probably worth much more. But a large staff of servants, weekly teas and dinners run into large sums, Senator Davis has found, and cannot be handled on the meager $15,000 a year which the heads of departments are allowed by the government.

It may be on this account that the Senator is conferring with Hollywood movie magnates, in an effort to recoup part of the $100,000 a year that his services to the United States have cost him.

Customs Officials Seize Hoover Sugar Cane

WASHINGTON, March 30.—(AP.)—President Hoover is shy two bottles of juicy Porto Rican sugar cane. The government took it away from him.

While in Porto Rico the Chief Executive, thinking of his little grandchildren and Secretary Hurley, who also has youngsters in his household, decided to bring back some of the cane for the children.

It was easy to get two large bottles of cane, but Agriculture Department inspectors at Hampton Roads seized it because they feared it carried tropical plant diseases.

Lawrence Richey, secretary to the President, consulted with the inspectors, found them adamant, and finally told them:

"Oh, all right, throw it overboard."

There is much cloudiness over the entire country this morning due to low pressure areas, but the precipitation is light. The disturbance that produced the rain over this section Saturday and Saturday night is now in the Far Northeast, probably producing further rainfall or snow. Another disturbance is centered over Southern Texas. High barometer still covers the northern plains states and Manitoba. The southern disturbance is causing light precipitation, mostly snow, over the Southern Rocky Mountains and the western plains.

The weather is cold over the entire country, but over most sections the tendency is towards rising temperature. Cold weather will continue over this section during the next 24 hours.

BISSELL, WIFE RECONCILED

WASHINGTON, March 30.—Artie Bissell, of Beaver, Pa., and his wife, Gladys, who represented this city in a national beauty pageant in 1927, after nearly three years of separation have been brought together in hope of future happiness. Their 2-year-old daughter Diane was the cause of the reconciliation.

Mrs. Bissell said today:

"What I want is a tiny home in the country, far away from the publicity that has hounded me ever since I took part in the national contest. I want to cook, keep house, look after Diane and make my husband happy. I never want to have my name appear in a newspaper again."

Bissell, who has been in business in Pittsburgh, but has given it up to come here in order to effect reconciliation said:

"I had entered suit for divorce, but know now that my place is with my wife and baby. We both feel that we owe more to Diane than to anything else. In making her happy, we have something to strive for, and there is no way in which Gladys and I can do more for each other than to be together again. With Diane the cause of our reconciliation, as the center of the family, I am sure of our future happiness."

manded a double brandy. She drank this and then three more, the proprietor who knew her well remonstrating with her. She wrote a note on the back of a menu card and then started her car.

A servant from a nearby chateau saw the car zig-zag down the road slowly and then suddenly commence at full speed toward a breach in the wall. It fell through the breach into a ravine, more than 200 feet deep.

Police, investigating the suicide, identified her as the former Mary Margaret Laird, of Birmingham, Ala., born in 1899. She and Townsend were married six years ago and so far as known the child, a girl of 5 years, is the offspring of that union.

David Townsend, made wealthy in Wall street, today would not accept the police explanation of suicide in the death of his wife, but insisted that it must have been an accident. He said:

"Margaret was happy. She had my entire fortune at her disposal. I cannot explain this tragedy. Anyway I won't accept the suicide theory. It is too horrible."

Joseph D. Grafton, who was said to have been a former husband of Peggy Davis, has not been around Pittsburgh for at least six years, a brother said today. Members of the Grafton family said they had never seen the stage star.

ROOSEVELT'S STRENGTH SURPRISE

Poll Shows About One-Half Of 1928 Delegates Favor Governor of New York

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt's apparent strength among the Democrats who went to Houston in 1928 and nominated Al Smith for the presidency occasioned a good deal of surprise, speculation and gossip in Democratic quarters here today.

While it has been generally conceded that Gov. Roosevelt is out in front of the other candidates for the 1932 nomination, the poll conducted by Jesse I. Straus revealed that Roosevelt's strength is considerably greater and more diffused throughout the country than had been thought. If the poll can be taken as an accurate index into Democratic thought anent 1932, it would seem that Roosevelt is now the choice of approximately one-half of the party, with considerable additional strength in the matter of second choice.

SMITH SECOND

Of the 844 Houston delegates polled, Roosevelt received the votes of 478, while 125 went to Smith, 73 to Owen D. Young, 39 to Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, 38 to Senator Joe T. Robinson, 35 to Newton D. Baker, 15 to ex-Senator James A. Reed and the rest scattering.

Gov. Smith as second choice to Roosevelt did not surprise Democrats here, nor did it particularly impress them. It was generally interpreted as "a complimentary vote," quite natural under the circumstances, but without great significance. They were more impressed by Owen D. Young's 73 votes than by Smith's 125, for the belief persists in Democratic circles in Washington that in the end Roosevelt and Young will be disclosed as the two great antagonists in the convention next year, with Gov. Ritchie and Newton D. Baker occupying the role of dark horses.

The big question in many Democratic minds is whether the Smith influence is to be exerted for Roosevelt or Young. The answer to that question may grow more and more important as convention time approaches.

ROOSEVELT PLEASED

ALBANY, N. Y., March 30.—Gov. Roosevelt's commanding lead for the 1932 Democratic presidential nomination as revealed by a poll of delegates to the 1928 convention conducted by Jesse Isidore Straus, of New York, came today as a surprise to Roosevelt, according to some of his close friends.

Although Gov. Roosevelt refused to comment, it was learned he secretly was pleased with the result of the Straus poll, particularly regarding his strength among southern Democrats.

Democratic state leaders have been insisting ever since the last election when Gov. Roosevelt was swept into office by the greatest landslide in New York's history that he would "walk away" with the presidential nomination next year.

West Launches Boom For Roosevelt, Dill

SEATTLE, March 30.—(Universal.)—King's County Democrats have launched a boom for Senator C. C. Dill as running mate for Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, in the national election in 1932.

The naming of Dill was the climax of Todd's speech, in which he eulogized Roosevelt as the champion of the people in the power issue and as a sane executive fit to deal with the prohibition question.

GANDHI'S FOES REPENT, CHEER

BOMBAY, March 30.—(INS.)—The masses of India, as if repentant over last week's surliness toward Mahatma M. K. Gandhi, spurned his foes today and hailed him as their true leader.

Between 80,000 and 100,000 men and women fought to get a glimpse of him as he appeared in a flowing white robe at the forty-fifth annual session of the Indian National Congress, now in progress at Karachi.

Surrounded by his apostles, the "holy man" sat in silence on a wooden platform in the bast open-air stadium, and heard the multitude vigorously cheering those who reiterated India's demands for complete national independence.

Congressional proceedings were in charge of Vallabhai Patel, president of the Nationalist organization. In addition to indorsing the Gandhi-Irwin pact and calling for its support, he directed the adoption of resolutions for total prohibition in India and the extension of the franchise to women.

DRIVER HERO IN BUS TRAGEDY

LAMAR, Col., March 30.—(INS.)—Complete recovery was predicted today for 15 school children rescued half-frozen from the blizzard-bound school bus in which five pupils perished during 36 hours of imprisonment.

The survivors praised the heroic efforts of Carl Miller, the driver, who perished striving to bring help to the children. His body was found near the bus. He had given most of his clothing to the children to keep them warm.

Funeral services were being planned today for the six victims, all of whose bodies were taken to a mortuary at Holly, Col. All died of freezing, according to Dr. G. E. Casburn.

At Maxwell Hospital, where the survivors were taken, it was said no amputations were believed necessary, and all the children were recovering the mobility of their limbs.

The children told of Miller's efforts to keep them from sleeping and freezing by encouraging them to whistle and move up and down the narrow bus aisle while the blizzard raged.

TEMPERATURES RISE

The men, who had apparently spent the night in some secluded room, stalked in on Christ Swanson, the engineer, at 6 a. m. yesterday. They tied him to a chair. Then they located Henry McIver, the watchman, and told him to pull the alarm boxes as usual.

They worked eight hours, taking time out for lunch.

MACDONALD'S FOES UNITED

LONDON, March 30.—(Universal.)—The Labor government rested less secure today when it became known that Lord Beaverbrook, powerful newspaper baron, has composed his differences with the Conservative party.

The Tories will now present a united front against the Socialists. Heretofore their ranks have been split between Beaverbrook's empire free trade followers and the Orthodox Conservatives led by Stanley Baldwin.

As a result of the adjustment, the Conservatives' chances of overthrowing the government have been considerably increased. In many quarters the defeat of the MacDonald government is regarded as most imminent.

BRIAND SPEECH STIRS BERLIN

BERLIN, March 30.—(INS.)—Gloom pervaded the European political field today in the wake of Aristide Briand's speech before the French Senate denouncing the proposed Austro-German customs union as an eventual disturber of continental peace.

Official Germany, somewhat taken back by the vehemence of the French foreign minister's remarks, characterized them as "regrettable" and productive of probable "serious" consequences. The resultant tension, observers pointed out, was feared to have considerably undermined the spirit of co-operation in Europe sponsored so energetically by Briand in the past.

It was understood here that Foreign Minister Curtius, of Germany, was preparing an answer to Briand.

Coolidge Sees Fraternal Ideal in Lepers' Friend

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., March 30.

To the Editor of The Sun-Telegraph:

Far out in the islands of the Pacific, the soul of Brother Joseph Dutton has been released from the limitations of this earth. Bearer of an old New England name, born in Vermont in 1843, captain of a Wisconsin company in the Civil War, novice in a Trappist monastery in middle life, voluntary missionary to the lepers of Molokai for over 44 years, dedicated to poverty, surrounded by hopeless misery, yet joyously consecrated through the years to the things of the spirit, this man died a saintly world figure.

Mr. Coolidge

Amid all the pretensions of the present era, the pride, the guile, the strife, here was a reality. Wherever his story is told men will pause to worship. His faith, his works, his self sacrifice appeal to people because there is always something of the same spirit in them. Therein lies the moral power of the world. He realized a vision which we all have. The universal response to the example of his life is another demonstration of what mankind regard as just and true and holy. He showed the power of what is good and the binding force of the common brotherhood of man.

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

It was reported that the motor will render the flight of airplanes absolutely silent and eliminate all fire danger. The engine is only one-third the size of those powering planes at present, and is said to use 87 per cent less fuel when flying at 120 miles an hour.

Its operating cost is asserted to be at 50 per cent under that of other engines.

Methodists Launch Attack On Grape Juice Business

WASHINGTON, March 30.—(Universal.)—Charging it is: Nothing more than open hypocrisy to allow trade in commercialized wine materials and still pretend to enforce the prohibition act, the Methodist Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals today launched a bitter attack on the grape concentrate business.

The denunciation was taken here as emphasizing a break between Mabel Walker Willebrandt, former assistant U. S. attorney general in charge of prohibition cases, and the dry organization. Mrs. Willebrandt is now counsel for grape concentrate interests.

The blast of the Methodist Board came as the result of an extensive grape advertising campaign conducted recently. It was stated that promotion of the grape product is not an effort to increase the consumption of alcohol in the home.

Sister Denies Rivalry For Winship Chauffeur

SAN FRANCISCO, March 30.—(AP.)—The Examiner says Miss Eugenia Cuyler Blount today emphatically denied that she had written a love letter to Ray McGunigle or that she and her sister, Mrs. Dorothy Winship, were rivals over the family chauffeur.

The newspaper says Joseph W. Preston, Jr., disclosed a purported letter allegedly written by Miss Blount to the chauffeur previous to the suicide of Lieut. Commander Emory Winship, U. S. N., retired, here last week. A coroner's jury laid the suicide to an "affair" between Mrs. Winship and the chauffeur.

Preston, lifelong associate of the former naval officer, and with him co-executor of the estate of the commander's first wife, said he had a photostatic copy of the alleged letter, assertedly found by Winship before his suicide. He said it read as follows:

"My Dear Ray: Mother mailed me a letter to Palo also care Mrs. Jansen about January 29—air mail—and it should have arrived there the 30th or 31st. Will ask Mrs. Jansen for it—or if Dorothy got it, ask her, and send it to me.

"Expect to go to Palm Springs for my health about Friday. Will send you a wire telling you where I'll be—if you still want to write. Thanks for hiding things—letter and telegram.

"Run down to Sherman Clay and get a piece called 'I Surrender, Dear.' Think of me when you play it, as I do of you whenever I hear it.

"I love your code. I. L. U. Too."

The letter was signed with an unintelligible symbol.

MANAGER BILL MAY FOCUS ON PITTSBURGH

Third-Class Cities May Not Be Included When Measure Reaches House

By ED PRENDERGAST
Staff Correspondent

HARRISBURG, March 30.—D. Glenn Moore and other sponsors of the Moore bill to provide city managership for Pittsburgh and third class cities will meet tomorrow to decide whether the third class city phase of the measure will be dropped.

It is considered a likelihood, and the bill may enter the floor of the House so amended that Pittsburgh alone will be affected.

Some strong opposition in Allegheny County may be wiped away by the elimination of the third class phase, although Mayor Kline, reputed opponent of the bill, probably will exert all pressure within his province to halt the bill's progress.

STIRRING WEEK AHEAD

It was indicated that by cutting out the third-class cities, Moore's measure will gain considerable strength and have some chance to fight its way through.

One of the most stirring weeks of the Legislature so far is expected beginning tonight in both House, Senate and committee rooms.

The blue law bill which would extend the Sunday hour for selling milk from 9 a. m. to 10 a. m., brought out of committee last week, will be on the floor tonight. Its wording is such that, in the opinion of some leaders, it can be amended to include repeal of many or all blue laws.

While the most optimistic despair of any blue law repeal moving far, this action to amend, if made, will force a test vote and embarrass many members whose districts have in them a considerable sprinkling of liberal votes.

TAKES PINCHOT PLAN

First on the calendar tonight is a bill which would reduce the motor license tax from $2 to $1. This measure, including as it does one of the planks in Gov. Pinchot's platform, will be beaten down by Pinchot's men in the House.

Encumbered finances and a drop in revenue due to the depression have induced the administration to abandon this plank for the time at least.

Sowers, manipulator for the Philadelphia group, seized the idea of taking over the plank, getting it on the floor and watching his political opponents writhe.

A drive for action of a revision of election laws sponsored by 33 civic groups, and Senate committee action on old age pension proposals, may push the utility issue into the legislative background temporarily this week for the first time since the organization of the Legislature. Senator Frank J. Harris is sponsoring both measures.

Alexander P. Lindsay, of Pittsburgh, chairman of the Pennsylvania Elections Conference, which is backing the revised code, has sent out an SOS to members of affiliated groups for a meeting here Tuesday afternoon immediately preceding the meeting of the Senate Elections Committee, which has charge of the revised code. The code was virtually shelved for the session two weeks ago, but the conference Tuesday is in hope of reviving it.

A petition for an appeal in the same case also was filed by the Public Service Commission which originally granted the power company a license for water power development on the Cheat River water shed.

ARRAIGN MILLS IN 'GIRL MART'

LOS ANGELES, March 30.—(Universal.)—Assertedly a frequent patron of Hollywood's "girl bazar," John P. Mills, wealthy broker, is scheduled to appear for preliminary examination before Judge William S. Baird tomorrow on two counts of a statutory offense against Clarice Tauber, 16.

Appearing with Mills as co-defendants will be Olive Clark Day and William H. Jobelmann, said by the district attorney's office to have been the proprietors of the "girl mart" which trafficked only in girls of tender years.

Tammany's Great Expose

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

believe-it-or-nots why doesn't the hall nominate Ripley for President?

When we heard the news you could have knocked us down on the second bid.

The old guard isn't going to stand for any nonsense like that. It's going to investigate itself and fire a Democrat.

And as for the Tammanized Republican who got the gate, we will drop the portcullis over the civil service moat and let him scramble to safety.

We will get him a neat, appointive job as janitor to a self-feeding furnace.

There has been a movement to name the bridge after Judge Crater. Hoping that he would show up for the dedication ceremonies.

We always thought G. Washington, Esq., was a great citizen. Until we started to name a bridge after him. Then enemies found many flaws in his character. There are only 11 George Washington bridges in the eastern states. We might as well make it an even dozen.

Naming that Hudson bridge after the father of his country is no compliment to George's initiative. We wouldn't be anywhere today if G. W. had waited until they built a bridge across the Delaware.

There wasn't any bridge across to Trenton so George organized a leaky rowboat regatta.

Which is exactly the instant that another George in England started hearing bad news from the outlying counties. The Hessians had bolted the ticket.

If they don't name the bridge after Washington we would like to know who's next. We can't think of anything or anybody. It's like soap and water. You either use it. Or you don't. There is no alternative.

If you don't think G. W. was head man around these works, always remember what George the third said after Yorktown.

He was looking at a picture of G. Washington and remarked: "Well, I ain't doing so bad. I'm third."

There wasn't even any George the second then. And we don't know of anybody who can run second to him today.

The papa of the suburbs fought all over the eastern territory and it seems that he has earned all the citation they can give him. We can at least do as much as Texas does for Sam Houston. Whenever there's a building, a culvert or a filling station to be christened you can bet that Sam's name is topping the hay vote.

So from now on it's the George Washington Bridge to us. A monument to progress and the gateway to New Jersey road houses.

NURSE MURDER CLUE HINTED

FALL RIVER, Mass., March 30.—(INS.)—The possibility that a new phase of the murder of 20-year-old Verna Russell, student nurse, might be uncovered within a few days, was established today by District Attorney William C. Crossley, of Bristol County. He said:

"Information I have received inclines me to the belief that the murder was committed in this state. If this proves to be correct, it will uncover an entirely new angle in the case, an angle which I cannot hint as yet, but which will rock the state if it is true."

Considerable importance hinged upon location of the death scene. If it is proved the murder was committed in Massachusetts, Elliott R. Hathaway, Fall River "playboy," accused of strangling Miss Russell to death, faces a possible fight against death in the electric chair. The penalty for the crime if committed in Rhode Island would be life imprisonment.

NAUTILUS ADDS 'DARE DEVIL' TO CREW

'Ike' Schlossbach, Taciturn Naval Officer, Gets Berth On Sub En Route to Pole

Aboard the trans-polar submarine Nautilus, in which Sir Hubert Wilkins proposes to voyage under the ice to the North Pole, is a gallant company of adventurers, each pledged to brave death in many forms to win renown and scientific trophies. Below is presented the first of a series of personality sketches dealing with men who have vowed to traverse the unknown reaches of the ice-encrusted Arctic. It concerns Commander Isaac Schlossbach, chief officer of the Nautilus.

By HERMAN GIESKE

YONKERS, N. Y., March 30.—The most taciturn man aboard the Nautilus is the expedition's dare-devil, Commander "Ike" Schlossbach.

Whereas other heroes volubly narrate their exploits, those of Commander Schlossbach have to be dragged piecemeal from his tightly closed lips.

But if the crew of the sub-sea boat chanced to be marooned at the North Pole, "Ike" might save all their lives by flying them out, if he could find a cake of ice long enough for a takeoff—for he's one of the crack pilots of the United States Navy as well as a veteran submarine man.

FOND OF MOBILITY

Why anyone would want to follow two such perilous activities, even "Ike" couldn't explain. He mulled the question over for quite a few moments before he answered:

"I guess I'm a bit like old Capt. Nemo in Jules Verne's book 'Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea.' Old Capt. Nemo's motto was 'Mobilis in mobili,' and I suppose I'm that way too. I like to be 'mobile in the midst of mobility.' Anyhow the sea and the air are two mobile elements that I'm most at home in."

As chief officer of the Nautilus, Commander Schlossbach ranks next in command to Capt. Sloan Danenhower, the Nautilus' skipper.

Schlossbach is a graduate of the U. S. Naval Academy. He was commander of the "fighting five," a famous Navy aerial bombing squadron which "out-gunned" and "out-bombed" all rivals in the most exacting tests of human and mechanical stamina.

NATURAL LEADER

No one going aboard the Nautilus could fail to pick out Commander Schlossbach as a leader of men, although he wears no insignia, as yet, to denote his rank.

Thirty-nine years old, nearly six feet tall, and built in proportion, he is in the prime of physical manhood, and neither the air nor the deep sea hold any terrors for him.

As an Annapolis man he is, of course, a thorough naval technician and he believes mechanical preparedness will insure the Nautilus' full success when she dives under the Arctic ice pack for the "last frontier" of adventure.

SUB IS 'DREAM BOAT'

Modest as "Ike" is, he has a romantic streak in him, too, for he said:

"The Nautilus is not just a 'pig boat' to us. 'Pig boats' they're called by some, because of the cramped quarters, and the dangers to which the men are constantly exposed. The Nautilus,to most of us, in fact all of us, is a 'dream boat,' for she carries with her all our dreams of fame and fortune."

MAN INJURED, 3 GIRLS HELD

City detectives today were questioning three girls in connection with the serious injury of George Stoner, 33, of Clairton, ill in an apartment house at 1411 Fifth avenue. Stoner, suffering from a severe scalp laceration, is in a serious condition at Mercy Hospital.

Dixie Davis, 22, Miss Estel Mrs. Edith Silverman, 24, and Jackie Morgan, 22, all of 1411 Fifth avenue, were held for further investigation today by Magistrate Leo Rothenberg in Center Avenue Police Court.

According to police, the three girls took Stoner to the Allegheny General Hospital early Sunday morning and then fled. Stoner, it is said, demanded his release and went to Mercy Hospital.

Questioning of Stoner at Mercy Hospital resulted in the arrest of the three girls. Before Magistrate Rothenberg they refused to answer questions except to say that they had been aroused by a noise in the hall of the apartment. # SENTENCE TWO MEN TO DEATH

Following refusal of their plea for a new trial, Cleo Peterson and Clarence Williams, Negroes, both of Clairton, were sentenced to death by Visiting Judge Frank E. Reader, of Beaver County, today for the killing of August F. Braum, Jr., West Elizabeth butcher, during a robbery October 4.

The men were convicted of first degree murder February 13 when the jury recommended the death penalty. A third man, convicted with them, Robert Smith, Negro, also of Clairton, died two weeks ago in the County Jail.

Before pronouncing sentence Judge Reader asked the men if they had anything to say.

Peterson replied:

"I'd like to ask for mercy."

Judge Reader explained that since the jury had recommended the death penalty, the court could only carry out the jury's order.

3 STATES FIGHT FOR WATER

WASHINGTON, March 30.—(INS.)—A race between three states to command the water supply of the Delaware watershed, as water daily becomes more precious in growing eastern cities, was pictured in briefs filed today in the Supreme Court by New Jersey and the City and State of New York.

The briefs criticized the report of Special Master Burch in New Jersey's suit to enjoin the City of New York from constructing a water supply system on tributaries of the Delaware River at a cost of $272,000,000.

New Jersey objected because the master recommended that New York be permitted to divert 440,000,000 gallons a day, and New York complained because the master disapproved plans to divert 600,000,000 gallons a day. Pennsylvania has a different plan under which she would be allocated 750,000,000 gallons and New York 80,000,000 gallons. The case will soon be argued in court.

For the World Fair in Chicago Dr. Dorsey arranged many exhibitions and later became curator of the Field Museum of Natural History. He held honorary degrees from Harvard and Dennison.

EVANS WANTS ENGINEERS TO SIFT CHARGES

Proposes Experts Study Public Works Department; Coal Purchases Scanned

Acceptable to both sides of the controversy, George S. Davison has been proposed as a member of the committee.

Attorney Evans indicated that Director Lang would be called to the witness stand tomorrow morning for questioning concerning appointment of employes to the Department of Public Works. He said:

"The appointment of the committee of engineers removes discussion in Council of street paving projects, but still leaves the problem of city payroll, political appointments in the Department of Public Works and garbage and rubbish removal matters to be brought out. I intend to go into these matters fully and expose them."

Only the presence of Mayor Charles H. Kline and Director Lang will be required in the quiz upon political appointments, Evans said.

SCAN COAL DEALS

Auditors investigating the Supplies Department, it was learned, are checking railroad records of coal shipments to the city following the receipt of reports that coal had been diverted to the use of the city employes.

The city uses about $200,000 worth of coal a year.

Controller James P. Kerr said today that the audit would probably continue well into next week. He admitted the possibility that some irregularities may have been found and has ordered Price, Waterhouse & Co., Kerr's auditors, to make a full report of their findings regardless of whom it hits.

Evans' request for the appointment of the committee followed his efforts to introduce into the record photographs of La Porte and Campania streets, upon which no previous mention has been made. He explained that this evidence termed as "surplus testimony" was introduced to make general his charges that the present system of preparing contract estimates and the entire system of the department is poor.

SCORES STREET WORK

La Porte street runs into Verona boulevard. The pictures submitted by Evans show that the street is paved to a dead end—a bluff, variously estimated from 15 to 30 feet. Campania street, Evans said, was another example of the inefficient system of the department. He added:

"It's a mud-hole. The grade was cut far below the natural grade and I want to show this because Mr. Reppert spoke of the great efficiency of his department."

Attorney Lee C. Beatty, counsel for Director Lang strenuously objected to the introduction to this evidence, but was overruled by Councilman Harry Little, acting president in the absence of President John S. Herron, confined to his home by illness.

EVANS SETS TIME

Joining in the argument Assistant District Attorney Colvin precipitated matters by suggesting that Council put Mr. Evans upon a time basis. He declared that if Mr. Evans wants so much time to present his case, it should be given him. Evans interrupted here saying:

"I want two days to produce the official city records on the 78 projects under fire and then expert witnesses in to discuss them."

Attorney Beatty suggested that each construction job be taken up in detail to show the extraordinary circumstances which caused the increases in materials used, to which Reppert replied that he desired that this investigation go to a logical conclusion. He said that Mr. Evans had raised some question well worthy of study and added that he too had many suggestion he wished Council to consider.

It was during Reppert's statement that he assumed full responsibility for every appointment of an engineering position in his department. He added that all of his recommendations had been honored by Mayor Kline.

ENGLISH ASSAILS FOES

English then interrupted the discussion, declaring that he wished to defend Council's position in asking Mr. Evans to keep the testimony within the scope granted in the hearing, adding:

"I have made no effor to defend the Department of Public Works, because I have seen nothing to defend. Mr. Herron lies in his bed, another victim of character assassination. We have people mean enough to say that Mr. Kambach was sacreligious as a result of his speech, which he closed with these words: 'Heavenly Father give us the vision to see the right and do the right.'

"Our duty is to ge the facts and not let this hearing deal with milk bottles, pistols and second-hand lumber. We are being crucified in the public prints because we carry on this hearing in an orderly manner."

"The fault of this record is that it is a lot of piffle for the next election. If I have injured Mr. Evans' feeling, I apologize publicly.

Evans interrupted English declaring:

English concluded with:

"If we keep this, that and the other things out, things that are irrelevant, we will get somewhere. We should conduct this hearing in an orderly manner in respect to the memory of Mr. Kambach."

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Society Folk Home for Easter

In this week before Easter everyone is either going some place, or returning from one of the many diverting spots on the globe that attract Pittsburgh society folks.

Among those returning, the school set, of course, dominates. Lois V. Tack, a pupil at the French School, is home for the remainder of the holiday season after being in Atlantic City and New York with her father and mother, the Harry S. Tacks, and her brother, Frank Martin Tack.

Mrs. H. C. McEldowney is home from a month in Arizona, and Mrs. John Barton Luckie will be home from Palm Beach and Havana in a fortnight.

* * *

The Raymond Willeys, of Beacon street, entertained Saturday evening in the Longue Vue Country Club in honor of their son and daughter-in-law, the Joseph Currier Willeys, of the Dithridge apartments, who have just returned from a wedding trip to the West Indies. The dance was a most elaborate affair. The guests were received in the living room, which was banked with tropical ferns and spring flowers. Dinner was served in the ballroom and supper room adjoining, with covers laid for 150 guests. Festoons of spring flowers with rainbow tapers decorated each table. Dancing followed during the evening.

Notable Dinner

* * *

And now I want to talk about some more folks who are going away for Easter. Yesterday I mentioned some folks who were going to White Sulphur Springs, and today I want to add a few more names to this list. The James McKays will join the J. Albert McKays at White Sulphur.

Easter Visits

Mrs. George H. Love and her mother, Mrs. Howard Hale McClintic, are planning to remain in Hot Springs, Va., for the holiday.

The Frank B. Gordons and their daughter, Mary, home from Dobbs Ferry, have just arrived at the resort with Margery Hillman, also a Dobbs Ferry girl.

Mrs. W. Eugene Gary, of the Schenley Apartments, home from Florida, has gone to Pinehurst.

* * *

Among the entertainments at resorts was a dinner Mrs. C. C. Townsend, of the Hotel Schenley, gave recently in Pinehurst. Among her guests were Mrs. James E. MacCloskey and her daughter, Katharine, Mrs. Lawrence Barr, Mrs. William C. Fownes, Jr., and Mrs. Halbert J. Blue.

* * *

Miss Edith Rosemary Barkell, daughter of William M. Barkell, of Trenton avenue, Wilkinsburg, has chosen tomorrow as the day for her marriage to John M. Kirkwood, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Kirkwood, of Susquehanna street, Wilkinsburg. The ceremony will take place in the Penn-Lincoln Hotel, in the presence of the families and a few friends, with the Rev. J. Hackney Colclough, of the Pitcairn Presbyterian Church, officiating. Mr. Kirkwood and his bride will live in Whipple street, Swissvale.

* * *

Miss Dorothy M. Bepler, daughter of Mrs. Carline P. Bepler, of Whitney avenue, Wilkinsburg, became the bride of James A. Marks, of Arkansas, Saturday evening at 7:30 o'clock in the Wilkinsburg Second Presbyterian Church.

Evening Wedding

The bride, given in marriage by her brother, James A. Bepler, wore a gown of ivory satin, princess mode, with a veil of tulle. She carried white roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Margaret Jean Blume, of Leechdale, as the maid of honor, wore a gown of sky blue lace, and carried pink roses. Duncan Phillips, of North East, Pa., served as best man, and the ushers included another brother, Charles R. Bepler, and Ira Cummings. After the reception in the Bepler home, Mr. and Mrs. Marks left by motor for Arkansas, and will visit New Orleans and Mobile, Ala.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Greer, of Princess avenue, South Hills, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Mary Louise Greer, to Victor O. Friday, of Cathedral Mansions. No date has been named for the wedding.

Announce Betrothal

* * *

Leading at the junior prom of Ben Avon High School, held Friday night in the gymnasium, were Miss Sally Leech and Nelson C. Wilson, president of the class and chairman of the dance. The gymnasium was converted into a Japanese garden with cherry trees in bloom, a rustic bridge, Japanese screens and lights. Miss Ruth Thompson, vice president of the class, aided the president in arranging the event.

LOS ANGELES, March 30.—(Universal.)—Five hundred followers of Aimee Semple McPherson are reported to have bolted from the Angelus Temple Congregation, following "Sister" Essie Brinkley Locy, for eight years an aide of the dynamic evangelist, to a new church opening next Sunday.

While officials of the Temple today declined to comment on the secession, or even to admit any had seceded, Miss Locy readily announced plans for her new "Los Angeles Revival Center." She said:

CUTS SILK HOSE BILLS IN TWO

A New York fashion expert has found a simple, easy method to double the wear of silk hose and undergarments. These articles, worn next to the skin, wear out doubly fast because of the perspiration and other body excretions which soften and rot the silk.

This lady found that soap and water were inadequate for washing such articles. She recommends when washing silks to add a tablespoonful of Energine to every quart of lukewarm, soapy water. Wash and rinse as usual. This method not only cleans thoroughly and quickly but makes silks like new with revived colors and pleasing freshness. The difference in results over the use of soap and water alone will amaze you. It means longer life—real economy.

Energine is unexcelled also for quickly removing all dirt and grease spots from dresses, hats, gloves and ties. Large can 35 cents at any drug store.

Miss Carrier Speaks at Sewickley

Miss Blanche Carrier, of the department of religious education, University of Pittsburgh, is speaking this afternoon before the Sewickley Valley Woman's Club. Her talk, which is sponsored by the department of education, is being given in the Sewickley Theater under the subject "Living With Our Children." Mrs. Alexander J. Barron, department chairman, is in charge.

APPROPRIATE GARMENTS FOR THE QUIET DINNER AT HOME

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, March 30. — A quiet dinner at home entails just as much dressing and sartorial thought as though the feast was being staged in a fashionable restaurant. Shall we wear pajamas, an informal house frock or a formal tea-gown? For that is what the at-home section of the fashionable wardrobe now contains. And couturiers continue endeavors to outdo one another with new and novel creations, many of which are of striking beauty and originality. Pajamas, of exquisite fabric, design and coloring, disguise themselves so much so that they look like elaborate evening frocks. But they are none the less pajamas, even though flounces or overskirts hide the pajama legs and pajama tops grow bodice-like in cut and detail.

* * *

THE FORMAL tea-gown has much to offer. Of rich materials, it is simply detailed and most comfortable to wear, yet replete with dignity and grace. The new gowns for informal house wear are more elaborate, but yet strive to retain their essential simplicity. The formal tea-gown and the informal house dress are ideal for the woman of mature years, while the younger generation adopts the pajama for its own particular use for evening entertainments at home.

* * *

THE DRAWING today shows the salient features of two of the nicest models that ever made a quiet evening at home a pleasure as well as a duty. The pajamas are by Lanvin, who has used for this striking creation bluish-silver lame with a sash of pinkish silver. The bodice is draped in cowl-effect at both back and front. Three wide flat bands fitting snugly over the hips make the top of the skirt, to which is attached a flaring flounce. Beneath this flounce is what appears, at first glance, to be a second flounce reaching to the instep. In reality, however, there are two sections of this. The quasi-flounce forming pajamas slashed high at each side.

* * *

LANVIN'S CONTRIBUTION to the stay-at-home is a collection of several period gowns, ideal for informal house wear. The one sketched is of heavy marocain crepe in emerald green, hanging in long, clinging folds, the skirt just clearing the floor and slashed at intervals all around. The deep, flat bertha partially covers wide shirred sleeves. There is a heavy rope-belt of silver lame knotted at the side. This model is called "Elsa" and is quite obviously inspired by the "Lohengrin" period.

OFFICER'S DYING PLEA GRANTED

Fellow officers will act as pallbearers for John L. Donovan, 34, patrolman reporting at North Side station, who died yesterday in Allegheny General Hospital from a bullet wound in the head. A report to the coroner's office stated Donovan shot himself in his room at 909 Sandusky street early Saturday night.

In a note found in the room, Donovan requested that Lieut. John Joyce and Patrolmen John Keefer, Albert Bassett, Michael Walsh, George Sibbett and John McAndrews act as pallbearers. Inspector Charles Faulkner said the request would be carried out.

A head injury suffered about four years ago in an automobile accident in which one of his fellow officers was killed and another seriously injured near Buffalo, was ascribed as a possible reason for the patrolman's act.

SLAYING LAID TO RUM FEUD

WHEELING, W. Va., March 30.—Belmont County (O.) officials and Wheeling police are co-operating today in an investigation of the slaying of Jake Ficaritta, 25, alleged Wheeling rum runner, whose body was found along the Ohio River highway at Highland City, North of Tiltonville, O., early Sunday. It is believed that the man was taken for a ride, his body riddled with bullets and then tossed out on the road.

The body was found by two boys who had heard the automobile passing sometime earlier. Ficaritta was arrested by Wheeling police about a month ago following the burning of an opposing rum runner's home, but he was later released.

22 FINED AFTER RAIDS ON HILL

Alleged proprietors were assessed fines ranging from $25 to $100 and visitors from $2 to $10. Six alleged visitors were discharged.

BLAZE REVEALS STILL, 1 HURT

A man was burned today, and his wife and children escaped unhurt in a fire in their home, 460 Walter street, Mt. Oliver, which, police, uncovered a still and a quantity of moonshine, and caused damage estimated at $2,600, according to Fire Chief E. H. Smith.

The man—Thomas Orpikowski—is in South Side Hospital with burns about the body, received, fireman said, when he attempted to extinguish the blaze, which started in a bedroom on the second floor.

Chief Smith said he found a 500-gallon still, 500 gallons of mash and 50 gallons of liquor on the third floor of the house. The cause of the fire was not determined.

Bandits whose loot totaled $800 in eight holdups in sections of the city over the week-end were being sought by police today. Two persons, one a boy 16, were beaten and robbed by the thugs.

Edward Page, 16, of 5740 Aylesboro avenue, son of Frank T. Page, of the Page and Lawler real estate firm, was kicked in the abdomen by a man who molested him as he was putting an automobile in the garage at his home last night. Rendered unconscious, the boy, a Peabody High School student, was robbed of a wrist watch valued at $35.

MAN ROBBED CUT

Stabbed by one of three Negro highwaymen as Everett and Omega streets Saturday night, William Goodlick, of 535 Murtland avenue, was robbed of $15.60, according to police. Goodlick suffered a cut on the head.

Morris Finkel, of 6524 Dalzell place, manager of the Hill Top and Capitol theaters, was robbed of $300 late Saturday by two bandits who jumped on the running board of his automobile at Marion street and Baltzhoover avenue.

The robbers, who had abandoned a stolen machine ordered Finkel to drive to McKinley Park, where they took the cash and his automobile.

EAST END THEATER ROBBED

An armed man entered the office of the Brushton Theater, 715 Brushton avenue, Saturday night and forced E. H. Goldberg, of 1312 Wightman street, to open a safe. From it the robber took $200. He fled in an automobile.

Two bandits invaded the Mandarin Cafe, 546 Liberty avenue, looted the cash register of $50 and took $104 and a gold watch from W. J. Dent, of 2509 Charles street, a customer, early yesterday.

The Regent Restaurant, 114 Atwood street, was held up and robbed of $150 and the cash register in the Crystal Lunch Room, 7613 Frankstown avenue, was rifled of $25 by the same bandit trio within an hour early yesterday.

Felix Donatelli, a taxicab driver, of 4664 Gangwich street, was robbed of $17.40 by two Negro passengers in Whiteside road, early yesterday.

HOUSES LOOTED

A dozen house robberies in the city yielded the burglars more than $1,000 loot in cash, clothing and jewelry.

BOGUS AGENTS SHOOT WOMAN IN DRY RAID

Victim Called to Door, Protests Home Search; Men Flee at Screams

Two bogus prohibition agents were being sought through the northern section of the county today for the shooting of a woman who protested against their searching her home during a "fake" raid last night. The victim is Mrs. Stella Benslawski, 48, of 41 Federal street, Natrona.

While Mrs. Benslawski lies in the Allegheny Valley Hospital at Tarentum, suffering a bullet wound in the left leg, state police and county detectives are searching for the two bogus agents, described as being young and well dressed. Although Mrs. Benslawski cannot be certain she believes that a third man waited in an automobile outside her home.

CALLED TO DOOR

Mrs. Benslawski was called to the door of her home late last night by the two men, who declared they were prohibition agents and wished to search her home. While one man detained the woman in the living room of her home, the other began a search of the premises. Becoming suspicious, the woman ordered the men from her home and threatened to call her neighbors.

One of the young men drew a revolver and fired at the woman, the bullet striking her in the leg. As she screamed and fell to the floor the two men fled from the house. The youth who did the shooting fled through the kitchen, dropping the revolver as he ran.

POLICE NOTIFIED

Natrona police were notified. They rushed the woman to the hospital. County detectives and state police were then given a description of the pair. Mrs. Benslawski said that as the men fled from her home she heard an automobile start from in front of her home.

RETRIAL PLEAS BEFORE COURT

Arguments on new trial motions will be taken up this week in Criminal Court instead of jury trials. The arguments will be finished by Thursday, which will be set aside for defendants' pleas. There will be no court on Good Friday.

New trials will be sought in two murder cases. One is that of Otto Parsons, McKees Rocks, convicted in January of first degree murder with life imprisonment recommended. He was charged with shooting Policeman Grover Wolf, of McKees Rocks. The other case involves Clarence Williams and Cleo Peterson, Negroes, convicted of first degree murder for the shooting of August F. Braum, Jr., 52, West Elizabeth butcher, during a holdup. Robert Smith, Negro, also convicted in the case, died in jail two weeks ago.

J. E. Johnson, Penn avenue, East Liberty, alleged radio doctor, also has asked a new trial. He was convicted of false pretense.

Retreat Started By U. P. Ministers

The Rev. Dr. James M. Ferguson, pastor of the Bellevue United Presbyterian Church, addressed a conference of 125 United Presbyterian ministers today in the Second United Presbyterian Church, Stockton avenue. The conference marked the beginning of the Easter retreat of the clergymen.

If Your Ears Ring With Head Noises.

If you have catarrhal deafness or head noises go to May-Liggett's or your druggist and get 1 oz. of Parmint (double strength), and add to it ½ pint of hot water and a little sugar. Take a tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little, and is pleasant to take. Anyone who has catarrhal deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial.

BLUE SUNOCO

The Two Fisted Motor Fuel

Makes a New Challenge to All Others

Here's the Challenge . .

FASTEN to your windshield a Zenith Mileage Tester, fill it full of your favorite motor fuel (it holds 1/10 gallon) and run your car at uniform speed. Your speedometer will show the actual mileage covered.

Then over the same course, under the same road and weather conditions, use BLUE SUNOCO and observe the mileage covered.

If your speedometer reads one quarter of a mile longer on BLUE SUNOCO, it is obvious that 10 times that quarter mile, or 2½ miles, is the added distance you get on BLUE SUNOCO to the gallon.

Even though BLUE SUNOCO sells at regular gas price, we suggest that tests be made with premium priced fuels which sell for at least 3c more per gallon.

For best results use SUNOCO, the wholly distilled MOTOR OIL, with Blue Sunoco Motor Fuel
BLUE SUNOCO will not make gum deposits in any motor . . . neither will any other good gasoline

. . . THE PREMIUM MOTOR FUEL AT REGULAR GAS PRICE . . .
You save at least 3c per gallon

TELL IT TO SALLY

By SALLY MARTIN

Is Marriage Without Honor Form of Degradation?

If you discovered that your husband was cheating . . . would you just stumble?

Think carefully before you answer. This is not a make-believe situation. It is a very real, tragic problem which confronts many a middle-aged wife.

Suppose you were such a wife . . . had known some twenty or thirty years of marriage . . . had struggled up with your husband through hard times . . . had finally managed to achieve a comfortable home, a circle of friends, a little fund in the bank and the prospect of peace in the twilight years ahead. And you, yourself, were ready for that peace. You were tired. Ready to take it easy.

A Difficult Problem

And then suddenly—or with creeping vicious slowness—came the knowledge that your husband wasn't ready for peace—that he was turning back to youth again—snatching at Romance.

That he was unfaithful!

What would you do?

Would you confront him with your discovery? Would you weep and storm, rush into the divorce court—demand justice?

Or would you sit down and take counsel with yourself . . . survey your marriage coldbloodedly, as you would survey a going business . . . balance your assets against your liabilities . . . and decide to keep your mouth shut and stay by the ship?

Would you . . . could you continue to live as a wife under such circumstances?

Phillipa can and is! In one of the most remarkable letters which has ever been received in this department, she tells the story of her own tragedy and her own amazing decision. She tells it calmly, without emotion. But will you be able to read it calmly, without emotion? I doubt it! Here's a letter that will test every standard that you have.

"Dear Sally Martin:—

"I am a constant reader of your column, and I am often surprised and amused at the utter helplessness of many of those who seek your advice about their usually simple problems.

Believes in Silence

"This outburst is prompted by the fact that I read Ellen's letter about her husband who likes his evenings out—and the answer of Lucy, who advised her to act likewise.

"And I want to say right now that I am going through a period which would cause many women to commit murder or maybe jump in the lake.

"My husband and myself are well along in the thirties. We have our own home, and a nice car, which he uses now chiefly to take out young girls. I do not mention this by way of suspicion. I have heard it from reliable sources, and I know that it is true.

"But do I go into tantrums, raise Cain, and put it up to him? No! I'

A woman gains nothing by such actions. If her husband is human, he is going to become stubborn, and will go his own way anyway. So what's the use?

"She has redress in the divorce courts, of course—with possibly an uncertain alimony. But show me a woman who is any better off after she has gone through with a divorce, broken up her home and thrust herself out on her own . . . show me someone who is better off than the woman who plays 'dumb' shares her husband with other women, but lives in the security of being provided for, and having the shelter of a home.

"My advice to women who make such discoveries about their husbands is to keep quiet, and follow the path of least resistance.

"Man is ever seeking conquests, and usually returns to the fold after each escapade. So why make a fuss about what he does, and shove yourself out into the cold?

Entertain Young Girls

"It is the middle-aged married men, who have attained a competence and can afford it, who are entertaining the young girls of today. And there are enough young girls available to attract many a middle-aged man from his home and family in return for 'good times' and a few gifts.

"What can we women do about it? I say let him think he's putting it over on you, and stay secure! "PHILLIPA."

Well—what's your verdict?

Is Phillipa a sound and sensible woman—protecting her own future and the dignity of her home by refusing to expose her husband's weakness? Is she exhibiting amazing loyalty, noble, unselfish love?

Or is she shameless, mercenary—willing to stand defilement rather than earn her own living?

And could you follow her example? Could you admire such neglect and humiliation for the sake of "security?"

Or would marriage without honor and love and real companionship be degradation to you?

Dare you answer?

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Science Gains in Fight on Infantile Paralysis

Most mothers well recall the summers of 1915 and 1916. It was during this period that we were in the midst of that terrifying epidemic of infantile paralysis, medically spoken of as "acute anterior poliomyelitis." That was the most severe epidemic of this disease ever known.

Dr. Copeland

Unfortunately, little has since been contributed as to the actual cause of this ailment. But we have learned much as to the care of the patients who have the disease.

A medical commission at Harvard has recently completed a five-year study of the possible causes and treatment of infantile paralysis. It has been unable to isolate the germ causing the disease, but the commission has contributed a great deal of knowledge as to what to do in cases of the malady.

You will recall that the great terror of infantile paralysis is its crippling after-effects, caused by the paralysis. It is now possible to overcome this disability by careful and scientific muscle training.

The disease is usually ushered in suddenly with fever and intestinal symptoms. Sometimes there is noted a marked change in the habits of the patient. A child who is usually very happy and active suddenly becomes quiet and listless, often crying without apparent cause.

The much dreaded paralysis is not present at the onset of the disease. When it appears it progresses to different parts of the body. Sometimes the paralysis lasts for 24 hours only, or it may become permanent.

It is important, if possible, that a diagnosis of this disease be made before the appearance of the paralysis. Then the serum may be given. This serum is obtained from patients convalescing from the disease.

It is most important that children with the disease be kept from school and away from their playmates. Children who have had it once need not fear the disease again. But they may serve to transmit it to others—they may become "carriers."

At present most of our research laboratories and boards of health are devoting a great deal of time and energy to the gaining of further light upon this baffling disease. We pray they may succeed.

You can do your share by keeping your children away from homes where the disease is present. Carelessness in reporting the disease to the proper authorities and failure to maintain all isolation regulations are detrimental to the public and to your own family.

If there were needed any excuse for the support of research laboratories, a survey of this particular disease will give every needed argument. We must encourage every public and private institution and individual in a study of infantile paralysis. It is a menace to the welfare of every child and to the happiness of every family where there are children.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Tuesday, March 31

A very active day but one beset with hidden, intriguing and subtle forces is the presage based on the strong position of the mysterious Neptune in the trend of events. While there are several promising situations, the element of the sordid and secret being uppermost it would be wise to be on guard against all manner of fraud, duplicity and subtle undermining. Be careful with all writings and agreements.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a year in which an element of subtlety, and intrigue may complexion the affairs. There may be dangers through fraud, treachery and secret enmity, but with precaution against these there is some promise of a gainful and enterprising year.

A child born on this day should be enterprising, energetic and ambitious, but may have a career tinged by subtlety and intrigue. Singular or curious traits and talents may mark its adventure in life.

Love's Reawakening

Continuation of Love's Awakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Lillian Agrees With Madge About Plan

With meticulous care, Philip Veritzen took three white orchids from the box which Purnell had brought him, added a bit of feathery green and looked at my shoulder from which depended the fragments of the bouquet Dicky's ardent dancing had broken.

"I think your skill will be able to use these in replacing the others," he said, proffering the blossoms with a little bow. Then he gestured to Purnell.

"Take these back and keep them carefully," he said, and as the colored man hurried away with the flowers he showed again the slow smile which Dicky characterizes as the "canary-eating" one.

"If anyone of your feminine guests suffers a similar accident," he said, "just send Purnell for that box."

There was nothing for me to do but to murmur a polite "Thank you! You are so thoughtful," hoping that Dicky would realize the perfunctoriness of the response. I did care just then what reaction was Mr. Veritzen's.

I was proud of Dicky the next second when, with just the right note of admiration in his voice, he said:

"By Jove, Veritzen, no wonder they call you the past master of detail. D'ye need any help with those flowers, Madge?"

"No, thank you," I returned demurely. "I shall be able to manage them."

"Then suppose we leave her to her own devices." He gave me the indulgent smile one accords to a "fussy" person and I heard him explaining volubly to Mr. Veritzen, as they walked away that "Madge couldn't bear to have anyone near her when she arranged flowers."

"So she told me this afternoon," Mr. Veritzen returned dryly, and when they were safely out of sight, I leaned against the nearest support and laughed—from sheer nervousness, I suppose—until my muscles ached.

"Let me in on the joke," Lillian said behind me, but when I turned to look at her, there was no mirth in her face and her eyes were troubled.

"It's just the way Dicky is handling Mr. Veritzen over this flower situation," I said, and told her in a few words how Dicky had expressed his appreciation of the great producer's munificence to Mary, and of his insistence that I should wear Mr. Veritzen's orchids instead of his own bouquet which he sad sent "not knowing" that Mr. Veritzen already had provided flowers for all the feminine guests.

"'Not knowing' is good," Lillian commented when I had finished. "But then the Dicky-bird never was known to balk at a good one when it would serve his purpose. But how diabolically clever. I'll bet old Phil would like to get off in a corner and bite his nails because Dicky apparently isn't jealous, and especially because he has been politely informed that you wouldn't have worn his flowers unless Dicky had insisted that you do so—informed with such finesse that he hasn't even a crack or a rough edge to catch at his resentment. It slides off a polished surface, and he's just that most miserable of men, one cherishing a grievance which he cannot voice."

"I hope he won't take it out on Mary," I said, settling my orchids on my shoulder.

"Put 'em a trifle higher," Lillian said absently. I obeyed her, though I knew she was not thinking of the orchids. Then she asked abruptly: "What did you think of that dance Mary and His Nibs, What's-his-name—Cameron? were giving?"

"Just what are you, I fancy," I returned. "But I wish you'd tell me your opinion. Then I'd know whether I'd gone crazy or not."

"Whatever you're thinking, it's no crazier than the thing Phil evidently is planning," Lillian retorted. "It's plain that he's primed that strutting ape to cop off Mary one way or another, either to have her prefer him to Noel, or, failing that, to get her so intrigued with the idea of herself as an associate of the young star, that she'll jump at the offer Phil's told Cameron to make her."

"I'm glad you see it, too," I told her heavily, "but what's to be done?"

"Nothing, just now, except to have Mary stall Cameron when he makes her the offer I'll bet a cooky he has up his sleeve. Mary won't promise anything without consulting you first—that I'm sure of, so we're safe for a few days. And if you can't bring old Phil to the mourners' bench, during this Christmas vacation, I don't know but it would be a good thing to let her have a chance at whatever Cameron offers her. With Phil's sponsoring it no doubt will be something big theatrically."

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

The Excellent Service.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. I am very busy and wish to save myself as much work as possible, such as dishes and so forth. When serving a fruit cocktail or a salad, may the salad plate or cocktail glass be placed directly on the cloth?

2. If the salad is a vegetable salad and is served with the meal, should the salad forks be used? MRS. G.

1. The salad plate may be placed with the main course, to the left or the right (whichever you think more convenient) of the dinner plate. It is not necessary ever to put another plate under it. When we serve a fruit cocktail, it is best to place an accompanying plate. This doesn't mean many extra dishes, and the added excellence of service deserves a bit more work.

2. Yes, this is better.

When a Gift Is Not Necessary

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A young man who works with me has invited me to his engagement party. What I want to know is: If I do not attend this party, is it necessary for me to send a gift? And if so, should I send it to his fiancee's home?

I am not very well acquainted with the girl, but I have been introduced to her. H.

If you do not attend the party it is not at all necessary for you to send a gift. But it would be gracious if you wrote a note saying that it is impossible for you to attend.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you kindly inform me how to fill out an acceptance, or refusal, to a wedding invitation, when a small card is enclosed for that purpose.

Kindly respond on or before April 1, 1931.

Mr. .....a.....

READER.

One is evidently supposed to write in one's name in the space indicated, and "not," in the last line, if one is not planning to attend.

However, what I should suggest is the answering of the invitation as such an invitation should be answered, with a formal acceptance or regret, worded as the invitation is worded, and in the third person. The sending of such a card as you have indicated is not in good taste or good form.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Powell accept with pleasure Mr. and Mrs. (Bride's Parents)'s kind invitation for Tuesday, the first of March at 5 o'clock.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Women with brown eyes and brown hair seldom look well in either brown or gray, and black is only for the beauties among them. French blue is a factor for bringing out the coloring of the eyes and the complexion, and nearly all the pinks and reds and deep yellows look well on the brunette. Dark-eyed dollies appear to better advantage in light furs than dark ones. Gay, strong-toned jewelry befits them better than pearls.

Flat beau-catchers before the ears and along the forehead, so becoming when the profile chapeau is worn well away from the face, can be achieved by means of the paper curl. Arrange a short strand of hair in a neat circle, cover with a three-cornered piece of soft paper, and pin securely.

The theory of fixations emphasizes the overwhelming importance of child psychology. Childhood offers, far and above all other times, the opportunity to make of the embryo adult what you will. In the soil of childhood, most any kind of flower or weed can be made to grow!

Double chins are scared of massage. They shrink from it. Correct treatment consists of anointing with a heavy cream, picking up the flesh between thumb and first finger and rolling firmly. Continue for five minutes, then slap on a cold compress, a heavy washcloth which has been dipped in ice water and wrung out fairly dry.

Perhaps the most favorable ground for the sprouting of harmful fixations is the very first stage of development, up to the age of five. When fixations have developed during this period we find the child continuing to be selfish, self-centered, spoiled and querulous, long after the first five years have passed. Then in adulthood the same character traits persist.

Household Hints

Pear salad—Cut pears in halves, scoop out the centers and fill with currant jelly and cream cheese; serve on lettuce leaves with fluffy whipped cream.

The sick room never seems thoroughly disinfected without something done to the carpet. Tear a newspaper into small bits and soak in a solution of formaldehyde and water. Wring out the paper and scatter the pieces all over the carpet, sweeping them along with a broom. The paper will purify the air and carpet and keep down the dust as well.

OFFICERS' BODY BARS DEPUTIES

The exclusion of deputy constables was ordered by the Constables' Beneficial and Protective Association of Allegheny County at a meeting of the organization yesterday afternoon. The resolution provides that none but regularly elected constables, or those appointed by the courts to fill vacancies of the regular commissions, shall be eligible for membership in the association.

Contention over the deputies obtaining work of the elected constables is said to be the reason for exclusion of the deputies from the association. Constables are induced by the justices of the peace and aldermen to petition the courts for assistance and then denied work if a rift develops between the aldermen and the elected constables, the latter claim.

BIRTH CONTROL ACTION SCORED

NEW YORK, March 30.—(Universal.)—If the recent approval of birth control by the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America represents Protestant opinion, then that approval may come to mean the "voluntary bankruptcy" of the Protestant reformation.

This view is expressed in the forthcoming issue of "The Commonwealth," a leading Catholic periodical, made public yesterday.

The editorial says:

"Apparently the main body of modern American Protestantism has surrendered unconditionally to secularism. If the Federal Council correctly interprets the "corporate conscience" of the majority of American Protestants, it has done more than merely surrender the historic morality of Protestantism—it has joined the massed enemies of orthodox Christianity and now fights with them.

They arrested Mr. and Mrs. Bleighner on charges of keeping a disorderly house; and Mrs. Maroney and Ruben Strayer, a roomer, on charges of visiting a disorderly house.

A five-gallon can of moonshine whisky was found in the cellar, police reported.

At a hearing this morning before Justice of the Peace Ira H. Edmundson, Strayer was fined $50 and costs, and both women were discharged.

Bleighner was held for Federal authorities in connection with the liquor seizure. Police Capt. Charles W. Senn and squad raided the home on a search warrant.

GERMANS REACHED LIMIT OF ENDURANCE IN ATTACK

FOCH PICTURES FRENCH READY TO TURN ON FOE

Joffre Described as Calm In Face of Terrific Loss Inflicted by Germans

The 42nd Division was in excellent order. It had only recently arrived, was very well commanded and had not been through any costly experiences. The reserve divisions had been plunged, immediately upon their arrival, into a battle lasting several days, and it had considerably shaken them. Many of their officers were inexperienced or too old. The consequence was that the men of these divisions needed encouragement and their officers new blood.

Our methodical retreat of the last few days had enabled us not only to elude the enemy's grasp, but also to tighten up discipline and reinfuse order in the ranks. The arrival of reinforcements had also made it possible to regroup and reorganize the reserve division, keeping them during this process removed from the excitement of the forward line.

Our front was now firmly and continuously established and contact with the 5th and 4th Armies on the left and right had been regained. The result was a considerable improvement in the tactical situation and this in its turn engendered a feeling of confidence. The severity of the fighting, sleepless nights and exhausting marches intensified the inevitable depression that accompanies a retreat, and all ranks were in a state of serious fatigue. But it was already possible to predict that, with a few more days of rest and reorganization, the troops would be ready to face about and attack again with fair chances of success.

The hope, however, at one time entertained, of being able to resume a general offensive on or about September 2, had now been definitely abandoned.

Such was the situation when September opened.

Offensive
Joffre Ordered Allied Armies to Retaliate

"In spite of the tactical victories gained by the 3rd, 4th and 5th Armies on the Meuse and at Guise, the enemy's attempt to envelop the left flank of the 5th Army having been insufficiently blocked by the British and 6th Armies, makes it necessary for the Allied forces to effect a change of front, pivoting their right.

"The whole of the 3rd, 4th and 5th Armies will renew the offensive as soon as the 5th Army is freed from the danger of being outflanked.

"This movement may oblige the armies to continue falling back in a general north-south direction during some little time.

"The 5th Army, on the marching wing, must, at any cost, prevent the enemy from outflanking it on its left. The other armies, not faced by a similar danger and less pressed in their movements, must seize every favorable occasion to halt, attack and delay the enemy."

Refugees
Crowds Impede Movements of French Troops

The instructions then proceeded to define the limit that the retirement might attain, without in any way presupposing that such a limit would be reached. The limit indicated for the 4th Army was the rivers Ornain and Aube, in the region of Arcis-sur-Aube.

As can be seen, the Commander-in-Chief still thought it advisable, on September 1, to continue the retreat. We, of course, had only to comply with his views, profiting meanwhile by the breathing spell allowed us to further prepare our troops for the coming battle. During the next few days the retreat south continued without any interference on the part of the enemy.

By the evening of September 3 the forces of the Army Detachment were in echelon between the Marne and the Velse, with headquarters at Tours-sur-Marne. On the fourth the main body was on the general line of the Chalons-Bergeres-Etoges highway, with headquarters at Fere-Champenoise.

That morning, crowds of refugees which were being continually augumented by the inhabitants of the abandoned districts, had greatly impeded the movements of troops and supply trains. Passing through Vertus, about noon, I gave orders that, except between the hours of 3:00 p. m. and midnight, the refugees, on our line of march, were to be kept clear of the roads, so as to prevent any recurrence of this trouble and to ensure the movements of our trains.

Appeals to Army
Urges Troops to Extend Their Successes

On September 5, the normal services of supply, etc., appropriate to an army, were assigned to my detachment, thus enabling it to function independently of the 4th Army, and my force was formally constituted into the 9th Army.

The movements prescribed for the day of September 5 anticipated that the advance guards of the 9th Army would reach the line Sommes-ous-Fere Champenoise - Sezanne, but early in the morning of that day new instructions arrived from General Headquarters, which were to bring our retreat to an end:

"The time has come to take advantage of the hazardous situation in which the German 1st Army now finds itself and bring to bear upon it the concentrated efforts of the allied armies on our extreme left.

"The necessary dispositions will be taken during September 5 for launching an attack on the 6th...."

(After describing the tactical situation of the 9th Army, with a dangerous gap between its right and the hard-pressed 4th Army, Gen. Foch is informed on September 6 by Gen. de Langle that it will be two days before this space can be partially filled by new reserves.)

Under these circumstances, I felt that the positions now held by the 9th Army, however, threatening the immediate outlook might be, must be maintained at all costs. The only way this could be accomplished was by the display of exceptional energy and activity on the part of every man, and I made a pressing appeal to my army "to maintain and extend the successes it had already gained over an enemy who had suffered heavy losses and whose situation was now extremely hazardous."

Enemy's Plans
Resolved to Launch Heavy Attacks

As the battle might last several days, I gave instructions for the attacks to be carried out methodically: infantry was to be economized, artillery freely used and every foot of ground gained was to be at once organized for defense. These were the tactics prescribed for the commanders of all units.

The enemy, on his side, realized that his advance as a whole had been checked. His right wing being in difficulties on the Ourcq and his left definitely held up in Lorraine, he resolved to strike a decisive blow in the center.

This was his sole remaining chance of winning the victory on which he had counted, but whose probabilities had been so singularly diminished during the last 48 hours. For this final effort he intended to put in every man he had left in the region.

The main weight of his attack was to fall on the French 4th and 9th Armies. The plan was to put these armies definitely out of action, or, failing this, to force them apart and dash through the resulting gap. The execution of the plan, in what concerned the front of the 9th Army, was to be effected by launching violent attacks east and west of the Saint-Gond Marshes, that is to say, in the very direction I had fixed for the attacks of my 42d Division and 11th Corps.

Fight Hard
Gallantry of Moroccans Aid in Success

The fighting of September 7, 8 and 9 was destined to be furious on both sides, but it was to end in the defeat of the German forces.

(While Foch's record of the 9th Army's supreme efforts in the Battle of the Marne deals largely with tactical moves on a small part of the front, he displays from the beginning the same qualities which four years later are to bring him to the command of all the Allied forces. He contiuously urged his subordinates forward, regardless of difficulties and handicaps. To Foch there is no such thing as an army being too weary or too depleted to win victory.

On September 7 the 9th is still fighting for its life, gaining ground here, losing ground there, but on the whole looking forward to success. Foch moves his troops rapidly, giving aid at weak points, telephoning for help to relieve his right wing, sending reserves to the center from his advancing left wing. Through September 8 and into the 9th the situation continues tense, but those two days mark the Germans' furthest advance against the 9th Army.)

The gallant resistance of the Moroccan Division during the 9th had been capital to the success of our armies. It had enabled the 42d Division to carry out that most delicate operation, a flank march in the face of the enemy and, when every moment counted, to arrive in the nick of time.

Again, if we had lost the high ground about Mondement, we could not have held the spur of Allemant.

Difficult Job
Faced With Task of Stopping Enemy

This ground in the hands of the enemy would have opened up to him that portion of the plain of Champagne to which the 9th Army had been clinging with every ounce of its energy during four long days.

Finally, this resistance on the part of the Moroccan Division was all the more precious in that the center and right of the army had continued to give way under the enemy's heavy blows. In their violent, repeated and—so far—not very profitable attacks, the Germans must certainly have used up a large number of their troops; was it not likely that their absence would be felt at some other point of the front?

Reports from French general headquarters were showing that our armies on the west were making notable progress. It was essential for the battle that the 9th Army, then, should hold out, at no matter what cost, until the advance made by our left wing became decisive.

The task of the 9th Army was thus perfectly clear. However hard that task might prove, this army must contain the hostile forces on its front, prevent them from breaking through and stop them where they were until victory was assured.

A Good Sign
Cites Disorder in the Enemy's Ranks

I therefore once again called upon all ranks to put forth their best efforts and tried, by informing them of the enemy's situation along the rest of the battle front, to communicate to them my firm confidence in our ultimate success:

"Reports received at 9th Army headquarters show that the German army, having been in movement without halt since the opening of the campaign, has reached the extreme limit of its endurance. In most of its units, officers and non-commissioned officers no longer exist. Regiments are marching mixed together and general officers have lost control.

"Convinced as he was that we were incapable of offering him any further resistance, our vigorous offensive has taken the enemy by surprise.

"It is impossible to exaggerate the importance of taking advantage of this situation, and I ask each of you to draw upon that last spark of energy which in its moments of supreme trial has never been denied our race.

"The disorder in the enemy's ranks is the herald of our victory.

Heavy Losses
Intensity of German Attacks Increased

"If you fight on with undiminished spirit, you will stop him today, and tomorrow we shall begin to drive him out of our country.

"Remember that success comes to the side that holds out longest. The honor and safety of France are in the balance. One more effort and you are certain to win.

Historic Orders

After having commanded the 20th Corps during the early weeks of the war, at the preliminary Battle of Morhange in Lorraine, Gen. Foch was summoned to Joffre's headquarters on August 28, 1914. He arrived just as the Commander-in-Chief was planning to turn upon the pursuing Germans and stop their hitherto victorious advance toward Paris.

Although astonished to learn how vast had been the Allies' retreat, Foch was relieved to find no confusion or panic around Joffre, who forthwith placed him in command of the army detachment later called the 9th Army of France. His chief of staff was Col. Weygand, who was to remain with him through the war and is today head of the French military organization. Another aide was M. Tardieu, destined to be Premier of France.

The new 9th Army was well organized by the time Joffre issued the famous order of September 4, launching what was to become known as the First Battle of the Marne beginning September 5, 1914, with a surprise attack by Gen. Manoury on the 4th German Reserve Army. Throughout the battle the 9th Army played a valiant part. Foch's memoirs of this period are confined to a comparatively limited phrase of the historic conflict; he is telling his own story, not writing a history of the entire war.

Just what the 9th Army did he records in detail. Toward the end of his account it becomes evident that he is studying the wide problems of the war as a whole, as much as is possible from his restricted vantage-point as a commander of a single army. The 9th Army's business is to hold back and then pursue the enemy in the terrain between the 4th and 5th French Armies.

On September 6, after three days of terrific combat against the 3rd German Army under Gen von Hausen, the 9th finds the tide definitely turned in favor of the Allies. The enemy begins his precipitate retreat. Meanwhile Foch has received Joffre's historic orders to turn upon the enemy and issue some stirring orders to his own men.

The LOUDSPEAKER

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, March 30.—Pertinent observations on radio from various correspondents have reached the state of accumulation in this department that calls regularly for the co-operation of the composing room. Jenkins, fetch me the shears and the paste pot and we'll give over the morning to the mail.

Come letters from Evelyn Zook, Little Neck, N. Y., and Miriam Scobel, Great Neck, N. Y., protesting against our statement that Jessica Dragonette is regarded as the foremost soprano heard regularly on the air.

Writes Miss Zook:

"The radio is always shut off when any soprano sings except Alda. She is the only one to my mind who does not wobble and do the tremolo, which is so irritating."

And Miss Scobel asks:

"Let me know whether you do not agree with me that Frances Alda is undoubtedly the outstanding soprano who sings regularly on the air?"

Though Madam Alda is now definitely associated with radio we curiously—and perversely—insist upon identifying her with the concert and operatic stage, whereas we always couple La Dragonette with the microphone. Perhaps in a year we shall refer to Alda exclusively as a radio star, just as news writers commenting upon stage stars who have been in the Hollywood pastures a year invariably describe them as screen actors.

* * *

Here is something from John Hagopian, Dearborn, Mich., about Charlot and his recent thumbnosing at the broadcasters:

"Silence is golden; so Charlie Chaplin's characterization of the funny man deserved to remain mute. In his one appearance on the air, March 29, 1928, Chaplin indulged in a humorous anecdote which to this day has been imitated in many radio skits. Just as his screen gags are copied, so was his anecdote."

And Hagopian might have added, his technique of giving an overtone of pathos to his comedy. Amos recently stated he had been studying Chaplin's great gift for comedy which conceals a tear.

* * *

Our recent plea for the identity of that musical pathfinder who unearthed the Hoochie-Coochie strain from its Babylonian archives has been heard. The responsibility—better yet, the glory—belongs to Theodore A. Metz, the same man who wrote the immortal "Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight." Ladies and gentlemen, Mr. Metz:

"Noticed in your column that you wanted to know who lifted the Hoochie Coochie, etc. Well, as the old colored man used to say, 'Here I is.' I played that soul-stirring tune or strain for Omene, the Turkish dancer whom Abe Levitt, of the Famous Rentz Santley Troupe, had imported from Constantinople to delight visitors to Chicago during the World's Fair in 1893. The company was booked at Sam Jack's Madison Street Theater for the summer.

"Omene was the star and I was musical director and chorus master of the show. Out at the fairgrounds the different Turks piped and drummed the music as written down and arranged by me for the orchestra as an accompaniment for Omene. When I got back to New York I gave the tune to Tom Clark. He arranged it as a polka and it was published by Grasmuck & Schott."

Metz' place in American musical history should be more secure than ever. Wonder why the radio rajahs don't lead him regularly to the microphones?

WE NOW PRESENT

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor.

Take our tip and be near the loudspeaker tonight when Sigrid Onegin sings for Columbia-WJAS at 8:30. Outstanding in her program are some of the best known songs in the world's operatic literature—Habanera from "Carmen," the pleasing aria, "My Heart at Thy Sweet Voice," from Saint-Saens' "Samson and Delilah" and the traditional German folk song, "Lauterbach." Schubert's "Der Erl Koenig" (The Erl King)—written when he was 18 years old and one of his best works—is another highlight. Sigrid's voice has a range of three octaves and she can sing a soprano high C with ease. To show you that we're human we shall go from the sublime to the ridiculous by tuning KDKA at 9:30 to hear Mrs. Effie Watts in a Thompkins Corners revival of "Rigoletto."

Sigrid Onegin

Speaking of opera, Deems Taylor was brutally frank yesterday in saying that only 5 per cent of Americans know what it's all about.

* * *

We could see Clem Betts and Gypsy Carter in a surrey yesterday, so realistically did those sound effects men put across the mules' hoofbeats. "Moonshine and Honeysuckle" will be back on WCAE at 3 this Sunday.

* * *

Belle Baker's optimism was at its peak in her WEAF-WCAE appearance yesterday. In the five years that we have known Belle we have never found her in a dull mood either backstage or on the air.

QUESTION A DAY:

Please settle an argument. Was T. J. Vastine, the band master, in the Spanish-American War?—W. R., Dormont.

Answer—Tom was head man of the regiment band located in the Phillipine Islands. For two years he instructed Army musicians. It may interest you to know that Tom has played also in the Boston Municipal Band and the Boston Symphony.

* * *

We have asked sponsors of the Ted Lewis program to tune in on Pryor's Band and count the number of advertising words.

* * *

"After listening to Rudy Vallee last week, I think he should whistle all his songs," pens Betty Ferre. "Also write him another letter. He used the egotistic pronoun eight times by actual count."

* * *

NEWS FROM HOLLYWOOD AND GOTHAM; AMUSEMENT NOTES

Elissa Landi to Appear In Original Story Of Prison Life

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright 1931, by Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, March 30.

Roused by the criticism of Elissa Landi's first story, "Body and Soul," Fox is exerting himself to find proper vehicles for their new white hope.

Promising indeed is the news that Adela Rogers Eyland has been commissioned to write an original prison story for the Austrian actress. She is now visiting San Quentin, famous California bastille, to get material.

Elissa Landi

Miss Landi to make an odious but inevitable comparison is the Greta Garbo of the Fox lot. She was born in Venice, of Austrian parents, and was raised in England. She is married to an English barrister, and has written two novels.

After a glamorous hit on Broadway in "Farewell to Arms," the actress was signed by Fox. Her reception in Hollywood was disheartening; nobody paid much attention to her. Eventually, however, the studio woke up and broadcast a strong publicity campaign. "Body and Soul," her first picture, came in for critical condemnation, but the actress scored a personal hit. She isn't a conventional screen beauty, but has that disturbing something.

UNEXPECTED OPPOSITION

Meeting the youngster on the lot, Groucho Marx asked him if he had seen one of his pictures. Mrs. Coogan answered that he hadn't.

"Well," said Groucho, "You'd like 'Animal Crackers.'"

LATEST GOSSIP

Real low-down on the Ann Harding-Pathe negotiations is that the star hasn't signed any new contract of any sort. She still has a year and a half to go under her old agreement, however. In the meanwhile, Pathe hasn't given up hope of getting her to sign for a longer term. . . . After a lover's spat that lasted 10 days, Carole Lombard and William Powell are cooing again. Incidentally, Bill is sick with flu. . . . Count Alain De La Falaise, brother of the Marquis, is now with us. He will adapt foreign versions and assist Frere Henry at R. K. O. . . . According to a new edict of the Hays office, the word "sin" cannot appear in any more titles. Oh, well, the possibilities were about exhausted, anyway. . . . After years of retirement, Kathlyn Williams, heroine of that famous old serial, "The Adventures of Kathlyn," will return to the screen in Fox's "Daddy Long Legs." . . . Peacefully occupying the same office at Paramount are two publicity men who are handling Theodore Dreiser's "An American Tragedy" and Sinclair Lewis' "Let's Play King." . . . Incidentally, Dreiser is said to have reached an accord with Joseph Von Sternberg on "An American Tragedy." . . . One of the week's smartest strokes of business was executed by Fox when it signed George E. Stone on a long term contract. . . . Georgie is one of the best character actors in Hollywood. . . . Now that Jack Warner has gone to New York, Graham Baker says he is devoting more time to the Bobby Jones golf series.

A HELPING HAND

Hollywood may be a self-centered place, but now and again you run across something that makes you refuse to believe it. For instance, on every school holiday, the R. K. O. studio brings 150 children from the nearby Los Angeles orphanage to a special picture show in one of the company's large projection rooms. Such pictures as "Trader Horn" and "Tom Sawyer" are borrowed from other studios, when there is no R. K. O. film available that would have appeal for children.

Things like this warm you to the industry.

WAYNE FAILS TO GAIN

After making three pictures in the last year, the former U. S. C. gridiron man has finished up, and is preparing to start upon a free-lance career. Incidentally, First National already has shown an interest in him.

Wayne played the hero of "The Big Trail" and since then has made "Girls Demand Excitement" and "Three Girls Lost." None of these pictures clicked, so it's finis for him.

With a good deal of justice, he argues that he can't be entirely to blame for the public's stay-away attitude.

William Powell

Two New Pictures Offered in Harris

Two pictures are featured in the new bill which opened Saturday in the Harris. One is "Captain Applejack," with Mary Brian and John Halliday. The other is "Are You There?" starring Beatrice Lillie.

Plays, Players and By-Play

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

"Green Grow the Lilacs," Guild play in the Nixon this eve. and subsequently until they put the light out on it next Saturday, will bring back an Oklahoma that was wild and woolly before it was wildcat and oily. Mats. midweek and week-end.

Monday, April 6, the Nixon will dust off its motion picture screen, oil up its sound amplifiers, put a new carbon in its projection machine and go into exhibition of films in a big way. "Trader Horn," who was a best seller when he was between book covers, will appear under the alias of Harry Carey, and the white princess will be seen in the person of Edwina Booth. On clear days it will be visible twice daily. On dark days it will be shown afternoon and evening.

There could be no complaint if a ham comedian merely "cracked" a joke. Trouble is he usually ruins it.

In the Pitt tonight, the George Sharp players, plus Mollie Cohn, visiting star, will give us a dramatist's idea of what "The Eternal Magdalene" is. One may get approximately the same idea all other nights of the week and on Thursday and Saturday afternoons.

George's company will become a laughing stock again on Easter Monday, when it returns to comedy with "Stepping Sisters."

Sharp, by the way, is becoming keener, so he is opening with stock in Columbus, April 6. He plans to alternate players here and there.

"Blossom Time" comes back to the Alvin for the ——th time next Saturday night, the house being dark in the interim, the interior and the meanwhile. That fact that it is the ——th time for "Blossom Time" means that time means nothing to this lyrical miracle, which keeps young with old music. They call it a revival, although it never died. Thursday is the day for seats.

Five Hurt as Auto Crashes Into Pole

Prudence Warrington, 6, was removed to Altoona City Hospital suffering from a probable fracture of the skull. Her father, S. Warrington, Toronto, Canada, business man; Mrs. Warrington, John Warrington, 9, and Miss E. Hewer suffered cuts and bruises.

The party was en route to Jacksonville, Fla.

WICKED WARNER OLAND TURNS BOLSHEVIK IN THE DAVIS

By GEORGE SEIBEL.

You can't even keep a bad man down, and the infamous Fu Manchu of blessed memory bobs up as a Bolshevik in the melothriller in the Davis Theater. The vaudeville is gone, and Dr. Karlov must have killed all hoofers, warblers and funsters. Dr. Karlov is the new incarnation of Warner Oland, and his motto is "a murder a day keeps boredom away."

George Seibel

Certainly if there must be villians and murderers, Warner Oland is the man to put them on the screen. He gets such diabolical satisfaction from his dark plots. He looks as if he should have been a chef, but he mixes poisons instead of potato pancakes and manufactures bombs instead of biscuits. He proves that J. Caesar was a punk psychologist when he said:

"Let me have men about me that are fat."

THAT SORT OF DRUMS

Dr. Karlov has sworn to exterminate the Petroff family because one of them was responsible for the death of his daughter. On her deathbed she had the Petroff necklace, the cylindrical drums of which are "The Drums of Jeopardy," in the title of the picture. Every time one of these "drums" is sent to a Petroff, that Petroff dies.

It's the "I'll-get-you-yet" formula, with storms and trap-doors, forged notes and wild pursuits, and a lovely heroine with a comedy aunt.

Some day Warner Oland will learn that delay is dangerous if you're a murderer. He lets most of his victims escape because he likes to brag about what he is going to do. Do it now, Warner!

POLICE WIN AT END

Well, the brave police of New York win the final battle and drive off the Bolshevik invasion. The last seen of Dr. Karlov he was drowning like a rat, his hand clutching a vial of something or other that ought to be investigated by Hamilton Fish.

He may not be dead after all. These screen scoundrels have more lives than any feline Don Giovanni.

Artist Found Victim Of Fumes in Studio

SAN JOSE, Cal., March 30.—(AP.)—George Austin Dennison, internationally known artist in enamels, narrowly escaped asphyxiation while baking pottery in a kiln in his studio.

He was found unconscious by a friend, C. F. Ingerson. He had evidently been overcome from gas escaping from the kiln. He was given first aid and was reported recovering.

Things I Never Knew Till Now

(But which you knew all along!)

That in Al Jolson's new show, "The Wonder Bar," a "stage crew and a half" (about 15 men) must be engaged, although the curtain never goes up or comes down, nor is a "prop" ever moved.

That a can of ice cream will last longer (keep cold and hard) if it is wrapped tightly between two feather pillows.

That Swift employed the now widely used expression: "Nuts!" (a form of criticism) when he said: "It was nuts to them!"

That New York's best known and favorite dialectician isn't a Jewess, but a Polish Catholic (Lyda Roberti of "You said It").

That you see 16 different pictures a second in a movie.

That Frank Luke, of Arizona, who saw only 17 days of active service in the A. E. F. brought down 14 balloons and did over a million dollars' worth of damage to the enemy.

That Capt. Kidd (take this from Harper's History, Vol. K.) wasn't as bad as all that. He took "the rap" for many "higher-ups."

That bees have brains. The queen bee has the smallest.

That it has been said that of all the states Missouri alone can be self-supporting for any considerable length of time.

That the three highest large cities in the United States are Denver (5,279 feet), Atlanta (1,050) and Minneapolis (840).

That the term "flapper" is not Americanese, but of British origin. "Flapper" being used there for over two centuries. The term originally applied to young ducks not yet able to fly.

That the word "fan," meaning baseball fan, fight fan, etc., was coined by Chris Von der Ahe, owner of the St. Louis Browns in the '80s.

That "Gone to the devil" doesn't mean what you think, but was originated by lawyers in London, who patronized a noted public house called "The Devil," at No. 2 Fleet st. When the attorneys (solicitors to you, Lord Cavendish!) wanted callers to know where they were (when they were out to lunch) they put up a sign reading: "Gone to The Devil." (I do hope you all feel better).

That sophomore is a corruption of the earlier sophimore, due to the supposed derivation from two Greek words, one meaning wise and the other foolish, alluding to the air of wisdom assumed by students. (You know—clunks who theft gags for the school mag).

That there are 201 parts to the modern telephone.

That "pin money" is so-called because at one time wives were given an allowance to buy them, and they were so expensive that only the wealthy could afford them. Manufacturers of pins were permitted to sell pins only on January 1 and 2 of each year, thus "pin money" was saved for them.

That Kiwanis is a coined word from a Cherokee phrase meaning We Trade. The word Gob is a derivation from the Chinese "Sailor."

That "Ouija," which became renowned with the vogue of the Ouija Board, is believed to be a combination of the French "Oui" and the German "ja," both words meaning "Yes."

That the expression "a scrap of paper" was not first used during the World War. On January 17, 1878, the Russian minister, Baron Jomini, used it in a letter referring to the passage of Russ troops through Rumania.

That the term "moving picture" is credited to Thomas S. Tally, of Los Angeles, who so called them first in 1897.

That the expression "The Roaring Forties" means a storm center. It is a sailor's term for the seas between 40 degrees and 50 degrees north and south of the Equator, a stormy region of the Atlantic.

That in Spain a son can take his ma's or pa's last name.

That a watch balance vibrating exactly 18,000 times each hour will keep perfect time. But if it should vibrate 18,001 times an hour the watch would gain two and two-fifths minutes a month.

That the time of day began at sunrise, according to the Babylonians. The Jews and Greeks began it at sunset, but the Egyptians and Romans began it as we do—at midnight.

That the government averages six cents from every 15-cent package of ciggies. It has been estimated that the man who smokes a 15-cent package daily pays the government a yearly tax of $22.

That the largest private telephone exchange in the world is claimed by the Hotel Pennsylvania, N. Y., requiring 70 employes.

That the South Pole is colder than the North Pole.

That Oklahoma is the windiest state in the Union, Arizona the driest and Oregon and Washington get the most rain.

That the White House was originally painted white to hide the marks of fire on the walls, which were all that remained standing after the British had fired it in 1814.

That Broadway (in the city limits) is about 15½ miles long.

Terrible Acidity Attacks Stopped. Praises Quick Relief

"Terrible attacks of acidity were so weakening that they began to get on my nerves," says Charles Loreman of Rochester, Pa. "Then I tried ACIDINE. I cannot praise it enough. I feel so relieved and better in every way. I wish everyone who is suffering acidity would try ACIDINE."

Burning acid stomach, pain after eating, belching, gas, bloating, heartburn, dizziness, and the resulting nervousness, sleeplessness, and colds won't trouble you if you use the new prescription ACIDINE.

No other known remedy for acidity surpasses ACIDINE. Contains an effective starch digestant, Japtase, which liquefies 800 times its own weight of starchy food, under proper conditions. Five other scientific ingredients neutralize burning acid, stop gas, soothe irritated stomach lining. It's instantaneous action in clearing up the troubles that commonly lead to stomach distress is more pleasing than you would believe possible.

ACIDINE is safe, harmless and pleasant for adults and children. Used by millions of people. It costs you nothing if it fails for the ACIDINE people say to every druggist. "If any customer is displeased with the results obtained from ACIDINE, give them back their money immediately. We stand behind this product absolutely." Keep ACIDINE in your home always.

NEWS CAMERAMAN GETS THE REAL DIRT

The Leviathan has two live funnels and a dummy. Since Mingalone didn't want to be suffocated by smoke, he asked one of the deckhands to point out the dead stack. The fellow obligingly singled one out.

Mingalone ascended to the top and straddled the edge preparatory to shooting. Just at that moment a blast of inky smoke enveloped him. Black with soot and fury, the newsreel man scrambled down. Camera tripod in hand, he prowled the decks. But his informant had departed.

Stock Exchange Topics

National Cash Register Waiting for Business Improvement.

Omission of dividend on National Cash Register "A" stock evidently was decided upon so that all the company's resources might be directed toward completing the first half year with as little damage as possible. President Patterson recently predicted that conditions in the current six months would not be very satisfactory. Foreign business accounts for a major share of the company's profits and, with sales lagging in some countries abroad, naturally the effects have been felt. Management policy concentrated on aggressive sales campaigns and cost reductions and until these efforts show results belief is that the officers and directors considered cash conservation a necessary action. The dividend must be paid eventually as the stock is cumulative, but this would not be a big burden if the anticipated business improvement appears next fall.

A prominent bond house points out that in view of the heavy advertising which the current depression has received, to the effect that it is the most severe in a generation, it is well to bear in mind that total corporate profits in 1930 probably amounted to some five billion dollars, as against an actual deficit in 1921. Last year's profits were actually equal to those of the boom year of 1920. In the opinion of this firm, a strong bond market is looked for, that will last for a solid year and in which it is entirely logical to expect high grade rail bonds will eventually sell on a yield basis of less than 4 per cent.

Certain quarters of Wall street regard the current market quotation of Westinghouse Electric as not at all in keeping with the real facts of the situation. It is pointed out that the company owns one share of Radio Corporation common for each share of its own common stock. Therefore, for the sake of illustration, it is shown that an approximate quotation of 90 for Westinghouse and a quotation of 25 for Radio actually places the selling price of the former stock at 65, less its holdings in Radio.

The air literally buzzed with rumors of impending developments in the affairs of the United Corporation. But in spite of the fact that the rumor mills were working full time in the matter of supplying gossip, United was called upon to absorb a good deal of selling, some of it taking the form of substantial blocks. The company and units in which it has a substantial interest are credited with plans for extending their holdings in various operating properties. The old Consolidated Gas rumor is abroad again and also that involving United Gas Improvement. The latter in turn is reported making ready to extend a fresh offer to Public Service stockholders. And last but not least, rumors of impending heavy united financing have cropped up anew.

Evidently the action of the market in the last day or two has tended to undermine the confidence of professional operators who heretofore had held steadfastly to the belief that the upward trend would be maintained. At any rate that is the only inference which it seems possible to draw from the manner in which some of the recent pool favorites have slipped off. Syndicates working in various sections of the list had struggled valiantly through the first half of the week to keep their favorites in hand in spite of the disagreeable character of the news, particularly in the way of reduced and omitted dividends, which made its appearance. Sponsors for most of those stocks, in the last day or two, have been packing away from offerings and for the moment seem to prefer a position in the sidelines.

Auburn Automobile which has been cutting a wide swath on the bull side through the last six months or so, is being watched closely by the attorney general's office. The stock has been under scrutiny for several weeks apparently, but thus far the investigation has not disclosed anything in the way of evidence of manipulation which would call for action from that quarter. Auburn sold as low as 60⅜ last fall and has since been one of the most spectacular features of the market.

STOCK MARKET CONTINUES TO LOSE GROUND

List Develops Moderate Rallying Tendencies, But Fails to Make Progress

NEW YORK, March 30.—(AP.)—The decline in share prices showed signs of flattening out in today's stock market, but bears were in no rush to take their profits.

With reports of slackening steel mill activity in the Youngstown area and an inclination in automobile circles to revise downward the 400,000-car estimate of April production, speculative sentiment had turned sour.

The list developed moderate rallying tendencies occasionally, but was unable to make notable progress on the upside.

Trading was in substantial volume in the morning, but slackened as the day wore on.

Most observers felt that the market's substantial decline had been of sufficient proportions to entitle it to a technical rebound. Its recent flop, however, having wiped out about two-thirds of the rise of the first three weeks of February, left speculative sentiment confused and gloomy. Whether the market's February upturn will prove to have been nothing but another false start evidently will depend upon how well business holds up during the spring months. The road to economic recovery is rarely smooth, and most observers feel that the market's sinking spell leaves unimpaired the somewhat brighter business outlook that has developed since the first of the year.

The day's news included Sears, Roebuck's sales for the third period of its 13-month calendar and the comparison with the like period of last year was much the best of the current year, showing a decline of 6 4-5 per cent, bringing the aggregate drop for the 12-week period to 12 per cent. In view of the drastic cuts in prices, the dollar volume showing was regarded as about as good as could be expected.

A tabulation of the first 65 railways reporting February net operating income showed a drop of 51 per cent from a year ago and 65½ per cent from two years ago. The efforts of low copper prices and slack demand were clearly depicted in Phelps Dodges 1930 statement, showing profit of only 18 cents a share, against $4.80 in the previous year. Silver turned heavy again, losing ½ cent an ounce.

Call money held at 1½ per cent and was somewhat firm at that level. The month-end settlements may bring 2 per cent money before the end of the week.

Unfavorable Developments Preponderate

By B. C. FORBES

Mr. Forbes

THINGS DID NOT go so well last week. Retail trade was stimulated by Easter's approach, but most other developments at home and abroad were unfavorable.

As told here recently, there has been a disposition in the highest circles to act extremely cautiously pending more definite evidence as to whether recovery in general conditions is likely to prove lasting. Instead of accumulating more securities, the tendency has been to sell on the theory that lower quotations may be witnessed between now and the end of summer.

UNSETTLING news came rather thick and fast last week. The Federal Farm Board's announcement that it would soon leave wheat growers to shift for themselves created confusion—although the announcement is, from a broad gauge viewpoint, welcome, since obviously the piling up of mountains of surplus wheat with taxpayers' money could not continue indefinitely.

Reductions in dividends by important railroads caused railway shares to fall to new low levels, a natural event in view of the drastic reduction still being suffered in railway profits. Other railroads will have to take similar action before dividend cutting has run its full course.

The fourth downward revision in Anaconda's dividend invited fresh attention to the inability of copper producers to sustain a profitable level for the metal. Even at 10 cents a pound demand has proved apathetic. A year ago the price was 18 cents. Stoppage of its dividend by the ably managed National Cash Register Company came as a painful surprise. March's dividend showing will prove very bad. It may be, however, that the second quarter's dividend record will be less depressing.

THE LATEST income tax returns have added to the budget of uncheerful news, although it should have been foreseen that the shrinkage would be severe. Bank clearings, due partly to diminished tax payments, made a sorry exhibit last week. The volume of railway traffic persistently refuses to expand. The motor industry is not at the moment fulfilling the hopeful expectations formed at the beginning of the year, and the head of the largest company of them all now cautions against counting upon any startling demand until next year. The steel industry was notable to do better than mark time last week. Nor did any unusual encouragement come from the building industry. Consumption of electric power, however, rose.

THE THREATENED nonpayment of interest on New South Wales bonds held in Britain temporarily upset London, although nervousness was later somewhat allayed by intimation that the Australian government would make good. Silver continues to add to the world's economic troubles and all talk of constructive international action still remains nothing but talk. The Austro-German tariff pact nonplussed Europe. In Britain the Labor government has become increasingly shaky, with recent elections favoring the Conservative party. Peru's financial embarrassment was announced.

Better Position Shown By Bethlehem

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

RESULTS OF OPERATIONS of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation last year may be considered to have been fairly satisfactory in view of the general condition of the industry.

While the annual report shows that earnings were smaller than in 1929, they exceeded all other preceding years since the abnormal war and post-war periods. Due to recent increases in capitalization, earnings per share do not make such favorable comparisons but in 1930 they exceeded 1927 and 1924 and were nearly equal to 1925.

The complete annual report of Bethlehem Steel, released today, shows net profit of $23,843,406 which was equivalent to $5.26 on the common stock after deducting preferred dividends. This compared with $42,242,980 or $15.50 a share in 1929 and with $18,585,922 or $6.52 a share in 1928.

Net Less Than Dividends

NET PROFIT FOR the year fell short of covering common dividend requirements of $6 a share by 74 cents a share. Quarterly statements showed that requirements were covered in the first half of the year but not in the last half. It is unlikely that dividends have been earned in the first quarter of this year.

The fate of the common dividends in the future depends largely on the ability of the steel industry to show signs of recovery. Up to the present time progress has not been particularly impressive. Bethlehem directors are due to take action on the dividend at their meeting next month.

Effect Of Improvements

THE FULL EFFECTS of Bethlehem's great plant improvement program are still to be shown in net earnings. The sharp increase in profits in 1929 was partially due to operating economies resulting from this work, but the slump in business last year tended to hide improved operating conditions in the organization.

A large share of the improvement work was not completed until the latter part of 1930 and some of the improvements were left for the present year. Expenditure on plants last year amounted to $47,158,004. The final work on the program to be finished this year will cost $14,820,000. Obviously the benefits of this new equipment cannot become fully apparent until the volume of business achieves a more satisfactory level.

Shipbuilding Revives

THE REPORT STATES that 1930 was marked by a substantial revival in the shipbuilding industry. Although this was not reflected to any great extent in 1930 profits, the volume of new work on hand for the shipbuilding subsidiary is larger than at any time since 1921. In addition to supplying steel and other equipment for ships, Bethlehem Steel operates four shipyards.

In spite of the large expenditures for plant improvements, Bethlehem came to the end of 1930 with its funded debt materially reduced and with a strong financial position. A total of $66,810,995 of funded debt was retired during the year, leaving this class of obligations outstanding at $117,528,600 against physical properties of $502,154,330 and total assets of $719,760,397.

SIDEWALKS of PITTSBURGH

By William Pfarr

At some time or other you probably saw Shimmy, the little Boston terrier. He was the dog that wore the blanket inscribed "Nixon Theater" and his master was Harry Brown, the manager of the theater. Shimmy died the other day from injuries administered by a big police dog.

William Pfarr

It isn't much of an exaggeration to say that more stars of the stage knew Shimmy than knew any other dog. He was the favorite of those who came to the Nixon, and hardly a birthday passed that a star didn't hold a party for him.

At Christmas his mail was heavy with Christmas cards from notables of the stage. And a dozen times or more Shimmy enjoyed the pleasure of having his picture taken with Follies girls, or Scandals girls. Recently Lawrence D'Orsay sent Shimmy a shilling from London and on it was engraved, "From Lawrence D'Orsay to Shimmy."

Shimmy was always in the papers and inherited from the actors the habit of keeping a scrapbook of press notices. His best notice came when he stole the show while "No, No, Nanette," was here several seasons ago.

Shimmy was in the theater watching the show, but felt out of place so far apart from the cast, so he sped down the aisle, leaped over the orchestra leader's head and right into the stage.

That recent report that Senator Davis would go into the movies to play the title role in a picture version of his autobiography, "The Iron Puddler," was heartily denied by the Senator himself.

But some of the friends of the family had a lot of good, clean fun with it. They told others that not only was the Senator going Hollywood, but that his brother, David Davis, who is in the government's immigration office here, would sub for him in the dangerous parts of the film—a double for the Senator.

But David evened things. To every one of the hundreds who asked him about the rumor, he admitted it was true and had each of them call up the Senator's downtown office to verify the report the Senator was going to act in the movies.

For three days the Senator's office staff was busy answering the 'phones with strong denials.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., March 30.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Mr. Hoover just got back from Porto Rico after a call on our little dark brown cousins. He told 'em he would see that they had the same opportunities we enjoy here, so I guess he is having Charley Otis and Company, stock brokers, put in a branch down there. That will give them a leisure class, and the rest of 'em employment working for 'em. The President didn't think much of the Virgin Islands. He thought we were bunked on that deal. I think, myself, we ought to sell (or give away to some enemy) our island holdings, and concentrate entirely on the old headquarters ranch here at home.

Yours, WILL.

Pastor Scores Enemies Of Sunday Blue Laws

Although the Musmanno and kindred bills aimed at revision of the Sunday blue laws are probably dead, the discussion of the laws should continue for educational purposes, for nothing is settled until it is settled right, the Rev. Dr. W. Wolford T. Duncan declared in his Palm Sunday sermon in Emory Methodist Episcopal Church yesterday. He said in part:

"The violent spirit attributed to Mr. Musmanno by the press in reporting the legislative discussion, is not very reassuring to those who expect legislators to use their minds rather than their muscles.

"The proposed legislation is a piece of hypocrisy even though the promoters are thoroughly honest and sincere. It pretends to give Sunday baseball. It does nothing of the kind. No national game, such as the fans want, would be permitted, for no large league would give its profits to charity. It pretends to simplify law; in reality it complicates it by duplicating legislation. It claims to be American at the point of referendum; in reality it substitutes pure democracy for representative government and permits legislators to evade their responsibility, which is un-American. It bears the stamp of continental Europe rather than of America and would bring lasting benefit only to wealthy amusement corporations which care nothing for the people, and which see in it an opening wedge by which to secure larger revnue."

COMMERCE MEN ORGANIZE JOB AID DRIVE UNIT

DIVISION SEEKS $2,000,000 AS ITS QUOTA

300 in Group Slated to Meet; Labor Unions Here Indorse Indemnity Bill

The Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce unit, known as Division "B" in the Allegheny County Emergency Association's campaign for $3,000,000 for employment stabilization, was to meet today in the chamber auditorium to receive final instructions. The chamber unit is composed of 300 members.

The group has been assigned a goal of $2,000,000, to be obtained by canvassing corporations and employes. Corporations will be asked to subscribe the equivalent of a day's payroll and the employes a day's pay. The group is under the chairmanship of T. P. Gaylord, director and former president of the chamber.

Resolutions indorsing the unemployment indemnity bill pending in the Legislature were passed by labor unions under the auspices of the Central Labor Union and the Socialist party of Allegheny County.

Patrick McGrath, vice president of Pennsylvania Federation of Labor, opened the meeting, which was attended by 90 delegates representing 75 labor organizations of Allegheny County. John Heinz, representative of the City Fireman's Protective Association; John Kane of the Printing Pressmen, and Attorney Maurice Schneirov were among the speakers.

A message was read from the Rev. James R. Cox, pastor of Old St. Patrick's Church, urging the local group to support the measure. A copy of the resolution was sent to J. Anson Wright, chairman of the Committee of Pensions and Gratuities, in Harrisburg.

$7,500 WHISKY, 5 MEN SEIZED

Five men this morning were to receive a hearing before a United States Commissioner as the result of the alleged seizure by federal prohibition agents of whisky valued at $7,500, an automobile moving van and a sedan, in a public garage at Forty-fourth and Post streets.

Roy Scott and Fred Kyle, of 3717 Fifth avenue, Hyman B. Levine, of 6926 Kelly street, and Lewis Whuntz, of 1811 Mary street, are prisoners in Central Police Station. They were arrested in the garage late Saturday night where the agents reported finding the whisky.

Fred G. Battaglia, of 1405 Denniston avenue, said by the agents to have admitted being the owner of the garage, was released on his own recognizance to appear before the commissioner at a preliminary hearing.

Twenty-three cases of whisky were said to have been found in the sedan and 46 cases in the van. The agents are investigating to ascertain where the whisky-loaded automobile came from. There is a belief that the men made several deliveries before they came to Pittsburgh.

GIRL DISCOVERS BODY OF MAN IN HOME

Pair Seen Following Victim Believed to Be Killers; Letters May Furnish Clue

Four persons, including an 18-year-old girl, were being held today while homicide detectives investigated the murder of Joseph Perri, 38, of 1401 Gilmore street. The crime was laid by detectives to the Black Hand.

The body of Perri, known in the Hill district as the "Little Dago," was found yesterday afternoon in his rooming house by Felicia DelGatti, 18.

Perri was believed to have been shot by two strangers seen following him Saturday night. A bullet was fired into the man's heart. On the kitchen floor, on which the body lay, detectives found bottles that had contained home brew, and a deck of cards.

The DelGatti girl and her father, Ralph DelGatti, 43, at whose home Perri roomed; Salvatore Amendola, 41, of 909 Wylie avenue, and Joe Scuro, 40, of 34 Fullerton street, were arrested as material witnesses.

DelGatti and his daughter said they returned yesterday after a visit to a friend in Jeannette. Finding the doors of the house locked, Felicia peered through the kitchen window and saw the body, she told police.

FINAL HONORS PAID KAMBACH

Kambach and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Kambach, and taken to the church, where it lay in state until funeral services began at 3 p. m.

The aged parents bore the ordeal remarkably well, according to intimate friends, who said the father and mother were apparently fortified for the burial today of Kambach's sister, Mrs. Lillian Kambach Bock, who died Saturday in her home, 1113 Park street, Tarentum. Mrs. Bock's funeral services will be held in her parents' home at 3 p. m., with burial in South Side Cemetery.

KNIGHTS PAY TRIBUTE

About 100 members of Pittsburgh Commandery No. 1, Knights Templar, of which Kambach was a past commander, escorted the former Councilman's body from the church to the cemetery. Templar rites were conducted in the church by Commander Ralph C. Schrock.

Church music was by the Templars choir led by the quartet, Walter Earnest, W. A. Davis, T. J. Thomas and G. F. Wagner. Religious services were conducted by the Rev. R. L. Hutchison, pastor of South Side Presbyterian Church, assisted by the Rev. H. H. Forsythe, pastor of Sixth Presbyterian Church, an intimate friend of the deceased.

Mr. Forsythe, in lauding the former Councilman as a clean-minded boy who carried the virtue to manhood said:

"He was impeccably honest. I want to emphasize that on account of the charges against the city administration with which his name has been connected.

"The charges may have some basis. I have not the right to say but I know that George Kambach had no part in any maladministration. He died with a clear conscience, believing he had done his duty."

CHURCH CROWDED

The church auditorium was crowded to capacity and amplifiers carried the services to an overflow crowd of 100 in the church's Sundy school room and to about 1,000 that thronged the streets surrounding the church. Hundreds waited in the cold, wind-swept cemetery from 3 p. m. until the funeral arrived after 5 p. m.

The city administration was represented by Mayor Kline, Controller James P. Kerr, Councilmen Charles Anderson, Robert Garland, C. B. Connelley, W. Y. English and Harry A. Little; City Treasurer Roy D. Schooley, Police Superintendent Peter P. Walsh, Director of Public Works Edward G. Lang, Health Director Dr. C. B. Maits, City Clerk Robert Clark, Traffic Court Magistrate W. J. Soost, and W. R. Dunlap, director of supplies. Councilmen John S. Herron and M. J. Muldowney were confined to their homes through illness. Councilman R. J. Alderdice was in Florida.

CUB INFIELDER RATED LEAGUE'S BEST

IN EACH OF the last two seasons the baseball player named as the most valuable in the National League was a member of the Chicago club. In 1929 Rogers Hornsby received the award, and last year the honor fell to Hack Wilson. But according to Hornsby himself the real jewel of the league was entirely overlooked. And he isn't referring to Bill Terry, or Travis Jackson, or Frankie Frisch, or Chuck Klein or any of the others who generally come in for a flock of votes when that subject is brought up.

Elwood English

On the contrary, he has in mind a player who rarely gets more than passing mention in the newspapers. None other than Elwood English, Cub shortstop for the last four seasons, who probably will be found at third base this year if Bill Jurges, sensational recruit from Reading, keeps up his flashy spring work in the shortfield. Hornsby says the outside public has no idea of English's actual worth, that he is the most unappreciated player in the Heydler organization, and that for all-around value there isn't an athlete in the league who compares with him.

HORNSBY SAYS HE will not stop at rating English the best infielder in the league, but will go further than that and pronounce him the most valuable player on any of the eight clubs. He gives Woody that ranking on what he has done as a shortstop rather than on what he may do if converted into a third sacker, and points out that the position a man plays has a lot to do with it; that catchers, second basemen and shortstops should not be judged on the same level with first basemen, third basemen and outfielders.

"Catchers, second basemen and shortstops control the defense," the Cub pilot explains, "and a smart and able catcher, second sacker or shortstop is worth infinitely more to a ball club than a smart first baseman, third baseman or outfielder. Catchers, second basemen and shortstops get the bulk of the opportunities and do the heavy work. From that angle, English is the most valuable player in the league."

HORNSBY SAYS THAT to judge a ballplayer's worth you've got to play alongside of him, and that by doing so he has had an opportunity to get first-hand information on English. Woody makes errors, he admits, but says because he goes after everything.

"He goes after every tough chance," says Rogers, "and never sidesteps anything. He is smart. He doesn't give away plays, and he's in there in a pinch. He comes up when he should come up, but when a lot of others go down.

"ENGLISH WEIGHS ONLY 145 pounds, but when he gets hold of a ball he will hit it as far as Wilson does. He has all-around value. He can get batted balls of any kind, he can throw them, he can hit and he can run bases. English is not as spectacular as some other players. He goes along doing a job well without making any fuss about it. He has fine competitive spirit, the ideal baseball temperament. I do not hesitate to call him the National's most valuable player. Certainly he is the most unappreciated. I wouldn't trade him for any player in the league."

Len Harvey

AFTER THE LATEST disappointment they have experienced in the case of Len Harvey, American fight fans probably will be slower than ever to accept as title prospects or high-grade ring workmen any boxers whom England may send to this country in the future.

Experience had taught the advisability of waiting for evidence of class even in the Harvey instance, but a decision over the capable Dave Shade and a series of impressive training-camp workouts made Len look different from the average English fistic importation.

THE REAL TEST brought the same old answer, however, and all that Harvey did here was to add one more name to the long list of English failures. Jack (Kid) Berg is the only boxer approaching championship caliber whom England has sent over since the great Jem Driscoll.

The heavyweights have been the biggest busts. Phil Scott was only one of a number of false alarms in that class. England has not produced a heavyweight of real class since the days of Jem Mace and Charley Mitchell. Bombardier Wells, Joe Beckett and all the rest proved sadly lacking.

ANOTHER FORMER FISTIC star who has nothing to show for years of high-class ring work is Danny Kramer, once a bearcat among the little fellows. Pittsburghers will remember him as having stopped Chalky Wimler in one round back in 1922, and as having last appeared in this city against Curly Wilshur in 1926, the same year in which he made two visits to Youngstown, O., to knock out Eddie Weygant in three rounds and Phil Verde in five. Until Mike Dundee defeated him he was a contender for the featherweight championship in the elimination tournament of 1924, when Louis (Kid) Kaplan won the crown.

KRAMER BLEW INTO Los Angeles a few days ago, to be notified of a Boston suit for damages growing out of an automobile accident. He said he had not fought in three years, had no job, was looking for work and needed money.

It's the same old story told of many another fighter who failed to look ahead to the inevitable rainy day. "What has the fight game done for you?" a Los Angeles sport scribe asked. "Well, I don't know," replied Danny. "When I was up I had too many friends. Now that I'm down I haven't any at all."

TODAY USHERS IN a new spring season of horse racing in the East, the turf division which is made up of the big tracks of Bowie, Havre de Grace, Pimlico, Belmont Park, Saratoga, Jamaica, Aqueduct, Empire City and Laurel. Bowie opens the campaign today with a meeting that will see 12 days of racing.

Havre de Grace, Pimlico and Laurel will follow Bowie in the order named. Racing on the New York tracks will start at Jamaica on April 18 with Belmont Park following on May 15. Kentucky's opening is scheduled for April 18 at Lexington.

Bill Tilden

TWO WORLD-FAMOUS stars who turned pro and went into the movies appear to differ vastly in temperament. Bobby Jones is taking orders without questions, submitting meekly to re-takes and even letting the film director tell him how to make shots. But not so with Bill Tilden. He's still pulling the prima donna stuff, according to coast reports. Paul Lowry says that Bill Pickens, Tilden's advance man, painted the tennis luminary as being a changed man from the amateur days when he often had the sulks, or fought with the umpires, bawled out the ball boys and cast withering glances at sideline critics, and when, but for his remarkable ability as a player he would have been ridden off the course. But after watching Tilden start the production of his tennis movies, Lowry reports that Big Bill is still himself and hasn't changed his spots. Mr. Tilden directed everybody on the place—ball boys, opponent, script writers, camera man, director, assistants and all others within hearing, and particularly stressed that the camera must cut when he socked one into the net.

LOS ANGELES, March 30.—Rogers Hornsby led his lively Cubs into Los Angeles this morning with the idea of further taming the Pirates, of Pittsburgh. The Freebooters, however, are not alarmed over the prospect for the next three days. Jewel Ens and his athletes are convinced the Bruins were a lucky gang as they cleaned up on the Rovers in San Francisco; with a few breaks they expect to turn the tables here. Three contests are slated for Wrigley Field, the first to be played this afternoon.

Rogers Hornsby

Manager Ens has given Heinie Meine the slab assignment for the first clash. The St. Louis Dutchman worked four frames against the Detroit Americans last week and he was as steady as a clock. The Buccos expect him to baffle the Bruins for six or seven rounds of the opener here.

There was a different story to tell at the local ball orchard yesterday as the Pittsburghers wound up their California games with the Tigers. Ervin Brame and Claude Willoughby refused to throw any homerun balls to the Bengals, and the Buccos copped the finale, 4 to

Club Membership Tax Case Before Supreme Court

WASHINGTON, March 30.—(INS.)—The business—or sport—of golf is before the Supreme Court for settlement of a question affecting golf clubs with a membership of more than 1,000,000 throughout the country.

The question is: Must a new member of a club, who buys stock from an outgoing member as a necessary step to membership, pay a 10 per cent federal tax on it?

Ector O. Munn, who paid $4,500 for two shares of stock to an outgoing member of the Deepdale Golf Club, of Great Neck, L. I., as a prerequisite to membership, appealed from lower court rulings that he must pay a $450 tax on the stock.

Munn admitted if he paid the club for the stock he would be taxable, but claimed that, since he bought it from an individual, it is not taxable.

It's the third meeting between the two hard-punching featherweight rivals, Rodgers, the local Negro, and Datto, a slant-eyed Filipino, of Cleveland, and the fans who have managed to stay away from the two most recent mitt shows at the Garden in fairly large quantities will be back jamming the arena for this setto.

Jackie Rodgers

The first two clashes between the pair were jammed full of fireworks, with Datto carrying off the decision at the end of 10 rounds in each. He had Rodgers down four times in the second round, but couldn't keep him there in the first bout, and, in the second meeting, Rodgers sent him down three times in the first four rounds, only to finish up trailing again. As a result of all of that hectic socking and the fine recoveries of the knockdown victims, the fans aren't satisfied yet as to which is the better man, and tonight's meeting is supposed to furnish the answer.

The boys will have to be good to pack in more thrills in this latest test than they did in their other encounters, but anything can happen when two rivals toss loaded mitts at each other as this pair have a habit of doing, and, being forewarned, it will be your own fault if you stay away and miss something tonight.

All of the bugs are hoping that some night Rodgers and Datto will put on a replica of the Dempsey-Firpo slugging classic—although, of course, they don't want to see anyone get hurt, unless, perhaps, it be the fight scribes sitting under the ring ledge.

Young Rudy, of Charleroi, and Larry Madge, of Cleveland, are in the eight-round semi-final tonight. Frankie Goosby, Negro middleweight protege of Baby Joe Gans, of California, boxes Jimmy Taylor, of Cleveland, in the second bout, and Jackie Griffiths, Hill Negro

Says Nick Altrock

(Baseball's Comedian)

GULFPORT, Miss., March 30.—I have read all the big league managers' 1931 predictions and I see they've abolished the second division. If you believe all you hear they are going to improve so much this season that the Red Sox will be snapping at the Athletics' rubber heels and the Phillies will be poison in the Cards' and Giants' soup.

Nick Altrock

It's always like that just before the season opens. But by June the Red Sox will think they've had a winning streak when they split a doubleheader, and they will have to send out archaeologists to excavate the Phils. Those teams may think they are going places this season, but they might as well have reservations on a merry-go-round.

By CARL W. SHATTO

Although virtually eliminated as title contenders, the Yellow Jackets still have some old scores to settle in the International Hockey League's annual championship playoffs, and they propose to settle one of 'em tomorrow night when they meet the Cleveland Indians in their fourth game of the title series at Duquesne Garden.

The 3-1 setback which the local skaters sustained in Buffalo Saturday night brought their playoffs record to three defeats and no victories, and although not definitely distanced in the short race for the crown, they can survive only in the event that all four contenders — Cleveland, Buffalo, Windsor and Pittsburgh—finish the campaigning with three wins and three defeats each.

The chances that all teams will end up with even breaks, unfortunately, are not good. In fact, they are no better than the chances for a natural death at a ripe old age of a young man clinging to a pair of punctured water wings in mid-ocean, with nothing in sight except a hungry whale.

TO SHIFT LINEUP

The chances that Pittsburgh still can finish the title series with honors even, however, are much better, and Roy D. Schooley, president and manager of the locals, proposes to strengthen these chances by introducing several lineup changes in the Cleveland game here tomorrow. Duke McCurry, who has seen very little service in the playoffs to date, is to be returned to his old berth at left wing on the starting front line, and Mickey McGuire, who has been performing at that position, is to be transferred to center on the second forward wall. McGuire will be flanked by Tex White at right wing and Cam Proudlock at left wing.

Whitey Fields, who has been doing his skating in the company of White and Proudlock, is to be stationed at left defense. Art Berlett will be at the other point. Roger Smith and Leo Reise carried most of the defense burden in the first three series games.

Schooley today said that he was making the wholesale changes not because he was dissatisfied with the work of any individual, but because the combinations in vogue last week had failed to produce victories.

PLAY INDIANS TOMORROW

The Jackets' program for the second and final week of title jousting appears to be much lighter than was the card which was jammed down their throats during the first week of milling. After meeting Cleveland here tomorrow, the Jackets will meet Windsor twice—at Windsor on Thursday and here Saturday. The locals figure to down the Indians at the Garden and they figure to trip the Bulldogs anywhere almost anytime.

The Indians used their sticks freely in clubbing the Schooley stalwarts over their respective heads while they pulled out an unearned 2-1 decision in the series opener in Cleveland, and there is certain to be some retaliation tomorrow, even if there is no capturing of revenge. The Jackets gave an exceptionally sparkling and fiery exhibition in the Forest City, and a duplication of the form exhibited there is almost certain to be rewarded with victory here.

Most of the tickets for the local playoff games were sold in three-game strips, so another capacity crowd is virtually assured.

HAWKS TOP RANGERS

CHICAGO, March 30.—(AP.)—The Chicago Blackhawks outplayed the New York Rangers in every department to win a 2-to-0 victory and assume a commanding position in their second third National League playoff series, here last night.

N. L. DATES SET

MONTREAL, March 30.—(AP.)—Dates for the remaining games of the National Hockey League first place playoff between the Montreal Canadiens and Boston Bruins have been set. The fourth game will be played here today and the fifth, if necessary, on Wednesday night.

Carnera, Sharkey Not Signed, Johnson Says

NEW YORK, March 30.—(AP.)—Although admitting he would like to land the match, Jimmy Johnston, promoter, denied today the truth of published reports he had signed Primo Carnera and Jack Sharkey for a heavyweight bout at Ebbets Field this summer.

HOPPE, COCHRAN HERE TODAY

A double world champion and former champion of champions of the billiards world are in Pittsburgh today to begin a week of exhibition play on the green cloth tables of local academies and clubs. They are Willie Hoppe, former balkline king over a stretch of many years, and now a threat in the three-cushion sphere, and Welker Cochran, present world 18.1 and 18.2 balkline champion.

Hoppe and Cochran will make their first appearances in the Ellis Recreation Parlors, Diamond street, at 3 and 8 p. m. today, playing 200 points of 18.2 balkline and 25 points of three-cushions at each session and also giving an exhibition of trick and fancy shots. At 9:30 tonight, they are scheduled for an appearance in the Kenyon Parlors, Federal street. Their schedule calls for them to play at the Ellis Parlors again at 3 and 8 p. m. tomorrow, and in the Kalmer parlors, Forbes and Atwood streets, at 9:30.

On Wednesday afternoon and evening, they will play in the Homestead Carnegie Library Club and their engagements for the latter part of the week are gradually being closed by their manager, William Baker, who is making his headquarters in the William Penn Hotel.

Ollie Carnegie, hard-hitting local sandlot outfielder, has been signed to play for Hazleton in the New York-Pennsylvania League. The club is owned by Pittsburghers.

Barnard, Johnson Remains Lie In State

CLEVELAND, March 30.—(AP.)—A group of Cleveland friends met the train last night which brought the body of Ernest S. Barnard, president of the American Baseball League, to the scene of some of his greatest years—and to the place where he will rest for all time.

The body was taken to an undertaking parlor, where it will lie in state until tomorrow morning. Then it will be moved to Masonic Hall, where mourners may pass until the funeral services, in charge of Knights Templar, at 2 p. m. Burial will be in Knollwood Mausoleum, Cleveland.

ST. LOUIS, March 30.—(AP.)—Hundreds paid tribute to Byron Bancroft Johnson, one of the founders and the first president of the American League, as his body lay in state at a mortuary here.

Mrs. Jennie Johnson, the widow, who had returned to Spencer, after visiting her husband in his fatal illness, did not return to St. Louis upon his death, but remained at Spencer, Ind., where funeral services will be held Wednesday. The services will be under the auspices of Harmony Lodge of Masons, of which fraternity he was a member.

DISTRICT FLOOR COACHES TELL GAME'S NEEDS

Associated Press.

The decisions reached by the National Association of Basketball Coaches at its session in New York coincide with the opinions of the college coaches of Western Pennsylvania.

The urgent appeal to the rules committee by the National association for uniform officiating dovetails very nicely with answers from coaches to questionnaires sent out last week.

"The game of basketball as it is now played is satisfactory," Coach Ralph Hogan, of Carnegie Tech stated. "However, some method must be provided where the coaches and players will have perfect confidence in the officials, and the officials will be entirely free from pressure and criticism from the coaches and players."

Frank Wolf, of Waynesburg, believes that the rules are satisfactory the way they now stand and more would mar the game.

Western Pennsylvania coaches had something to say on the "block." Coach Wolf declared that blocking and charging fouls should be called alike by the officials. Coach Thorn felt fouls on these offenses should be called more closely. Coach Charles R. Davis, of Duquesne, had no objection to the present rules.

More liberal interpretation of fouls in the back court found few supporters in Western Pennsylvania. Coach Thorn thought there should be less fouls called for steps in the back court. Several district coaches were decidedly in favor of the basketball commissioner idea.

Pops Harrison, coach last season at Westminster, said the game was satisfactory as now played, but he undoubtedly would object to pushing up the basket. His team had a great advantage during the past season with several men over six feet.

Coach W. F. Henry, of Washington and Jefferson, who lost most of his games during the past season, felt that there was "not much wrong with the game as it is played today."

Dr. H. C. Carlson, coach at the University of Pittsburgh, stated he believed the rules satisfactory, except that a definite ruling should be had on the "block." He seemed inclined to believe that a rule would be established by the rules committee next month that would at least entitle a player to standing room on the court without being penalized when an opposing player dribbled into him.

Between Rounds

Joe Sekyra, Dayton heavyweight, who defeated Emmett Rocco, of Ellwood City, at New Castle, two weeks ago, and Benny Touchstone in the windup at Motor Square Garden, last Monday night, goes to the post again tonight in the feature event at the Castle Bowl, New Castle, Pa. Jimmy Kelly, former local southpaw welterweight knockout puncher, and Johnny Curtin are in a return bout of 12 rounds at Dayton, O.; Johnny Risko boxes Stanley Poreda, young heavyweight star, of Jersey City, in the main bout in Madison Square Garden, New York, with Joey LaGrey, of New York, and formerly of Johnstown, boxing Young Terry in one of the feature supporting bouts, and Benny Bass, junior lightweight champion, takes on Young Firpo, of New Jersey, in a non-title bout in Philadelphia.

Promoter Jim McGirr, of McKeesport, will not run a show this week, but is angling for a return bout between Jimmy Belmont, of Braddock, and Tiger Joe Randall, of Pittsburgh, for Thursday night of next week.

Rumors have it that there is a rift between Buck McTiernan, Swissvale middleweight, and his manager, Bunny Buntach, which may or may not be mended.

Sport Vignettes

As the Gent in the Brown Derby put it, it seems the Yellow Jackets weren't in the hockey playoffs, after all . . . And the latest simile is, "As full of local talent as a charter for a Pittsburgh wrestling club" . . . It is to be hoped when the ice playoffs are resumed here, tomorrow night, there will be enough police on hand to protect the officials from the fans, players and local management and to toss out on their collective ears those goofy fans who think it is smart to throw newspapers and cigar and cigaret butts and apples at the arbiters and make a shambles of the scene and set the stage for a beautiful young riot . . . That sort of hoodlumism was ruled out of baseball and other professional sports years and years ago for the general good of all concerned, and it wouldn't do any harm to show the world that Pittsburgh can take its hockey defeats as gracefully as it can its victories . . . Speaking of the hockey situation, how long (oh, how long?) will they be able to get away with the joke playoffs whereby a team that finishes as low as fourth across a season's play is put back into the running for a chance to knock off the team that emerged on top? . . . It's been the nickle-grabbing policy of the National League for years and has been adopted by the International League as a matter of course . . . We said, of course.

Can't you just imagine a fight at this late day between Jack Dempsey and Harry Wills, two old hasbeens who couldn't or wouldn't get together when they were in their prime and now are making the headlines as prospective opponents? . . . They'd probably have to bring Wills to the ringside in a wheel chair and trim his whiskers before the opening bell, while Dempsey has aged so much that he recently finally admitted he was through (a little birdie must have told him so) . . . Any promoter who would make a serious attempt to put on such a barney for money would sell phony tickets on the Grand National Steeplechase to widows and orphans, and any boxing commission that would pass the match should be examined for softening of the brain, if any.

Like a piece of fine fiction writing is the picture presented by the deaths, within less than 16 hours, of the only full-fledged presidents the American League has known in its 30 years' history, E. S. Barnard and Byron Bancroft Johnson . . . With the deposed repudiated and long-ill Johnson hanging on to outlive his successor, yet not knowing that the latter had passed suddenly on . . . Barnard was a competent official and a fine gentleman, but Johnson was one of the giants of the sport, a builder who laid the foundation for the Big Business that baseball was to become . . . And both started out as sports writers, which may or may not have been in their favor.

Bob Ripley asks us to believe it or not, but a street car man in Salt Lake City has piloted horse and electric cars 1,187,900 miles through the streets of that town . . . We choose not to fall for that one . . . Anybody will tell you the streets of Salt Lake City are not that long . . . The Italian baker of London who won $1,772,720 in the Irish Sweepstakes on the Grand National Steeplechase plans to return to Isola, Italy, to spend his remaining days . . . Well, $1,772,720 ought to be a fortune in that town.

The reappearance of Joe Sekyra, the Bohemian heavyweight, of Dayton, O., at the Castle Bowl, in New Castle, tonight is a reminder that Ed Fritz, the New Castle promoter, has been responsible for the making of a number of good cards in the Western Pennsylvania sector . . . He was the first man to put on Tony Herrera, Joey Goodman and Emmett Rocco, not to mention Phil Tobias and a few others, and other promoters in the district were glad to make use of them afterward . . . Spalding's 1931 Baseball Guide, the fifty-ninth annual edition, is just off the presses. As usual, in recent years, it is edited by John B. Foster, veteran baseball authority, and contains a storehouse of information.

Boxing referees in New York State henceforth will receive $50 and judges $25 at shows drawing anywhere up to $7,500, and from $7,500 to $15,000 the fees will be $75 and $35, while from $15,000 up the pay will be $100 and $50. Formerly the remuneration was $20 for referees and $10 for judges where the receipts ranged up to $1,500, $30 and $15 where the take was from $1,500 to $3,500, $50 and $25 on gates from $3,500 to $7,500, and $75 and $50 for shows that drew $15,000 or more. . . . The new scale is tough on the smaller clubs, which average around $1,500 in receipts; yet few will argue that a referee does not earn his pay, and the judges, too, sometimes. . . . Paul Berlenbach, former light-heavyweight champion of the world, begins a comeback attempt in a four-round special bout at one of the smaller New York clubs tonight.

SCOTT, LOWER MERION PLAY FINAL HERE

By JESS CARVER

Except for the playing of the relatively unimportant final game here in the Stadium Saturday night, the annual P. I. A. A. series for the state scholastic basketball championship is all washed up, over and done, and ready to be taken to the cleaners.

To tell the truth, it's been a bum affair. In the first place, the W. P. I. A. L. champion, which annually plays through the very TOUGHEST competition, has had to carry the tourney along. In the second place, through ruling of ineligibility, some of the best teams in the state have been booted out. In the third place, well, what this country, or state, needs is to have its basketball championships systematized.

LOWER MERION NEXT

Scott High, of North Braddock champion of the W. P. I. A. L. and victor in three inter-district games in the P. I. A. A. chase, will meet Lower Merion, last year's runner-up, on the title finale Saturday night. Scott gained the last round by kicking Hollidaysburg about, 41 to 15, Saturday night, and Lower Merion slipped in by virtue of a 24-13 win over Williamsport. This latter game was played in the Palestra of the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia.

I said above that the final game is relatively unimportant. That was written with Johnny Reed, coach of the Scott entourage, in mind. Johnny made the crack not so long ago that if he could win the W. P. I. A. L. title, he'd be satisfied, and so would the team. The folks at Scott figure that it is as important to annex the local league crown as it is to win the state gonfalon, especially under existing conditions.

Scott High, what with losing its captain and with having to play half a dozen ball games more than other teams in the state, has really made the P. I. A. A. tourney this year. The Scotties charged through the W. P. I. A. L. tourney, after having played a strenuous regular season, during which one defeat might have been fatal. Then the boys had to meet Westinghouse, third choice of the City League teams, which this year were not forced to play the W. P. I. A. L. rounds, but were shifted into a brand new district of their own and lined up with the tired and worn W. P. I. A. L. champion in a first round P. I. A. A. game.

After winning this one, Farrell, representing the Northwestern division (Districts IX and X), was brought on and was soundly trounced. These Northwestern teams, you know, can play through an entire season without winning a ball game, can experiment and work on a combination and then, by entering and winning the Mercer County tourney cop the title for the district and gain the P. I. A. A. title rounds without half a dozen tough games that W. P. I. A. L. teams have to play, and what is more, win.

EASY OPPONENTS

Farrell was booted into the discard and then, Saturday night, they brought Hollidaysburg into the Stadium. Hollidaysburg was in there because one or two other teams from the mountain section had been ruled out. The team had little offense and practically no defense, and would never have survived even the first round of the W. P. I. A. L. tourney, and it is to be doubted if it could have won the title in many of the league sections.

Of course, its all over now, but the shouting that will attend the final game. Scott is making no complaint, for the boys out there are very, very good sports, and despite handicaps that would have discouraged many another team, they've played ball from start to finish.

Pittsburgh ought to be in there pulling for this Scott outfit Saturday night tooth, nail and, just to be different, whiskers. Maybe something can be done to remedy the goofy situation as it now exist in the state.

CARLSON FAVORS SCOTT

Doc Carlson, Pitt basketball coach, and Billy Evans, principal of Scott High School, who saw Lower Merion win the Eastern final of the P. I. A. A. title competition at Philadelphia Saturday night, agree that the Scott floormen should defeat Lower Merion in the title game. Evans scouted the Lower Merion quint, but Carlson was present only as a spectator.

The Lower Merion team, Carlson and Evans say, is a strong aggregation, but Scott appears to be even stronger, and should be established as the favorite.

Bill Anderson, Lower Merion coach, was born in North Braddock, home town of the Western finalists against which his team will be pitted.

After this year, the smart thing for the W. P. I. A. L. to do would be to tell the P. I. A. A. to hold its own tourney, and let the league champion meet the winner of the state affair.

T'would only be fair.

The W. P. I. A. L. football committee will meet at the Fort Pitt Hotel Saturday morning at 9:30 o'clock to discuss plans for a Class AA division in football.

ARGENTINES WIN

LOS ANGELES, March 30.—(AP.)—With Diego Cavanaha showing the way, Los Pomeros, the Argentine polo team, galloped away with the last game of the Midwick mid-winter polo meeting yesterday by defeating Midwick, 9 to 7.

VANITIES PLAY TONIGHT

The Goldenson Vanities will meet the California girls on the California High School floor tonight. The California girls have not lost a game in two years.

PIRATES, CUBS OPEN SERIES TODAY

2. In doing so, the Pirebusters snapped a losing streak which had mounted to four games.

Ens announced last spring Boccie had sold Infielder Joseph Clarke to the Mission team of the Pacific Coast League. The Missions are a companion team to the Giants of San Francisco. When the Bucs were at the golden gate city officials of the Missions told inside inquiries concerning Clarke, who is a Berkeley boy. They wanted Stewie for ballyhoo and the deal has been closed. The purchase price was not announced.

Clarke came to the Pirates from Wichita in the summer of 1929. He was used for infield utility roles, but last season he was farmed out to Fort Worth from which club he was recalled. Ens has so many infielders he could spare the white-haired native son. Stewie is aged 24, he is small in height, but has much power and considerable speed. He should be a success in the class AA circuit.

The last clash with the Tigers was a hummer. George Grantham's homer into the rightfield bleachers in the third inning proved to be the winning run at the finish but the second baseman opened the way for two of the enemy tallies when he failed to come up with a grounder which was scored as a single. The chance was not exceptionally hard.

Brame prevailed on the slab for six rounds before going way to Claude, of the Kansas Willoughbys. The former Quaker was scored on in the eighth, but he had a one-run lead as he entered the ninth and he used the winning advantage carefully.

The Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph said facetiously yesterday the Buccos would have a chance to cop the last game if they could get Gehringer and Alexander out. Well, Ervin and Clarke shut the door in the faces of these two stalwarts and thus drove in a big victory spike. The same pair swamped the Buccos on the previous afternoon.

Pie Traynor's single in the first round started the scoring for the Pirates, and our boys were not headed off for the remainder of the game. Vic Sorrell and Arthur Herrig pitched for the Bengals.

The last game with the Tigers drew about 8,000 fans, the weather being ideal. Approximately 15,000 people saw the four-game series.

Chillysauce

Jewel: Ens' estimate of the value of little Lloyd Waner was emphatically expressed by the pitcher after one of the pesky defeats handed the Bucco by the Tigers. The tenth round was being staged, and the Bengals had two runs on the basepaths, with Andy Bednal working on Infielder Owen.

The Los Angeles ball park is much too short to permit of high grade play, all three fences being close. Even eventually there would have been apple pie a la mode for Sprout under the proper conditions. Lloyd backed to a point about five feet from the fence when he realized the drive would carry that far. A catch of the sock was possible, but the attempt might have brought a bad injury. Instead of relying for dear old Kiki, the center-fielder chose to dodge the risk. The drive was a double and the two runs went over, the Buccos losing.

Ens' reactions to the string of reverses were very unpleasant. He would have given much for that particular contest, even though it had no particular bearing. The manager was still smarting under the lash of defeat when I remarked:

"Jewel, do you think Lloyd could have caught that ball, and should he have tried for a rapture at it?"

Without hesitation Ens replied:

"Yes, I think he could have caught it, but I am glad now he did not try it. Much as I wanted to win that game, I would prefer to lose it than to lose Bibs."

Jewel had the right of the drab events of last summer when he spoke.

Stanley (Bucky) Harris may force a lot of people, including yr scribe, to ask for a recall of their early estimates of his club. True, the Tigers do not seem impressive on the form sheets, but they are showing plenty of speed, smartness and team spirit as the revamped team develops.

Harris, directing his club from third, has let fly with a lot of heading into Bucky's job. Judging by running and doubling, trailing and in bringing out hesh-snaring movements he has shown the Pirates a lot of fast ones.

"I don't know when I saw as much speed on one ball team," Joe Dugan remarked to the writer today.

The former Yankee star thinks the Bengals are due for some good pitching this year and that the team as a whole will function smoothly. So is said about the Waiker brothers, who may rival the Waners in the years to come. These two Bears are fast and they play with reckless abandon.

Mrs. Rauh Explains All Details of Mayview Contract Awards

this department in October, 1927.

"Of this sum, $650,000 was immediately allocated to purchase of land, equipment and furniture, roadways, etc., leaving $7,850,000 for improving, altering or constructing buildings.

LIST PREPARED

"A list of buildings was prepared, the individual items being listed in the order of their importance to the institution. Estimated prices were set opposite each item.

"These estimated prices were compiled, after the most careful investigation, by experts including Mr. Sullivan W. Jones, of New York, an authority of national reputation in welfare construction, and Mr. George R. Wadsworth, an expert on building costs.

"They were based on the lowest prices secured for similar work in other cities or states. They indicated that for the sum of $1,850,000 the City of Pittsburgh might expect to secure the following much-needed items:

"1—A cafeteria and kitchen unit to improve facilities for feeding patients and employes.

"2—A warehouse and refrigeration building to permit the purchase of supplies in large quantities, and an improvement in their handling and condition.

"3—The remodeling of a large brick barn into a much-needed infirmary, with a capacity for 150 sick persons.

"4—A definite schedule of repairs to old buildings, which were necessary to correct dangerous structural deteriorations.

"5—Erection of four fire towers for old buildings to reduce a very serious fire hazard, these fire towers also to include extra space for modern toilet installations to replace old, condemned and very unsanitary plumbing.

"6—A central laundry building with safe and economical modern equipment, including mending rooms, to provide neat and clean clothing and linens for the patients.

"7—Housing facilities for 410 trained nurses, male attendants and doctors, who were living among the patients in space originally designed and intended for patients, which space was badly needed for its original purpose and in no other way could be liberated for that purpose."

COMPETITIVE BIDS

"Drawings and specifications were completed for the above program, and the work was advertised for competitive bids in every way as required by law. The law specifies separate bids for (1) general construction, (2) plumbing, (3) heating and (4) electrical work, and sets up the principle that contracts should go to the lowest responsible bidder. It makes it the duty of the Department of Public Welfare to pass upon the responsibility of the low bidders, and to reject any who are not so qualified.

"Bids were duly received, examined and tabulated and were referred to the architect, together with copies of all other contract documents. They are still in his possession, as they should be. He is an official agent of this department with definite duties. Part of these duties, imposed upon him and expected of him under his contract with this department, is to be custodian of records until all the work is finally completed. There they are always at the call of this department and through us to the public. This is in exact accordance with customary practice, including the standards of the American Institute of Architects.

"The lowest bidder on the general contract was the Nicola Building Company in the amount of $1,234,941.

"The lowest bidder on plumbwas was the Soffel Company in the amount of $200,880.

THREE ACCEPTED

"After examining the sworn statements of assets and experience submitted by the above three contractors, it was the judgment of this department that all of them were responsible under the meaning of the law. All three were accordingly accepted, and contracts with them were executed.

"The case of the low bidder on the electrical contract was different. Like the others he was required to submit a sworn statement listing his assets and liabilities.

"But the two principal items thereon were a residence listed at $14,500, which the contractor claimed to hold in his own name, and 1,000 shares of oil stock listed at $10,000. Investigation proved that title to the residence was in such form that it could not be considered as an asset of the contractor individually, and that the oil stock was greatly overvalued in the sworn statement.

"These and other factors convinced this department that at that time this contractor's responsibility was not sufficient to justify the award to him of the contract in this case.

"Under these circumstances this department had no alternative but to let the electrical contract to the next lowest bidder (after satisfying itself of the latter's responsibility), namely, the Craig Electric Company, in the amount of $53,273.

"It will be noted that the sum total of the four bids accepted was only $1,572,976, or about $277,000 under the estimated cost.

PRAISES AGENTS

"This saving, in my opinion, was due largely to the knowledge, care and efficiency of our architects, Eric Fisher Wood & Co., in designing this work; to the collaboration of our able superintendent at Mayview, Dr. James S. Hammers, and to the advice of Joseph I. McDonough, whose experience during 30 years of continuous and loyal service in this department well qualified him to give sound advice.

"This saving meant that the city of Pittsburgh had contracted a program of construction for $277,000 less than the costs as originally estimated on the basis of the best information then obtainable.

"This large saving provided this department with the opportunity for further much needed construction and remodeling, which it had never hoped or expected to obtain from the total bond issue of $2,500,000.

"A net amount of approximately $33,000 of this $277,000 surplus was concurrently used for additional repairs and constructions in the original program under the original contracts. This still left about $244,000 available for entirely additional projects and purposes.

"Out of the $244,000, about $61,000 was set aside for additional furnishings, and for contingencies, thus leaving about $183,000 for further building constructions, including equipment and professional services.

PROGRAM EXPANDED

"After due consideration it was determined to make plans and specifications for,

"1—Modernizing the old hospital to include proper facilities for operative surgery.

"3—Providing fly screens for new buildings.

"4—General repairs to old plumbing and heating in the administration building and other buildings.

"5—Electrical fire alarm systems, and call systems.

"6—Laboratory and morgue.

"These six items are listed in the order of their importance. It was the opinion of the architects that all of them could not be obtained from the funds available, and such eventually proved to be the case. The laboratory and the electric alarm systems were abandoned for this reason, and for none other.

"Meanwhile, the four contractors on the original program had been performing satisfactory work.

"They had become familiar with the difficult conditions at the institution, and had shown excellent co-operation with the management thereof to insure a minimum of disturbance and interference to patients. This was of great importance, since many of the patients are abnormal physically or mentally, or both, and our first duty was to them.

"Moreover, these four contractors had all necessary equipment already on the job and at work. They were, therefore, ready to commence additional work without confusion to the institution, and to complete it ready for use sooner than others could do.

"For these reasons it seemed that the continuation of the original contractors would be of great advantage.

"Council concurred in this opinion, and directed this department to proceed with the additional work on a cost-plus basis, embodying their instructions in an ordinance which was passed by the votes of Messrs. Allderdice, Anderson, English, Garland, Herron, Malone and Winters.

"There was a clause in each of the four original contracts providing that the contractors could be employed for additional work at a cost of materials and labor plus 20 per cent. Such a clause is customary in all contracts, to provide for unforeseen contingencies.

CITY PROTECTED

"However, it was decided not to exercise this right until some limit of cost could be determined, so that the city would be protected from excessive extras over estimates.

"Therefore, to arrive at a reasonable limit of cost, bids were advertised.

"The four original contractors participated in the bidding. While none of them was low, nevertheless the total of their four bids was only $152,261, while the average of all bids represented a total of $152,250, or a difference of only $11. Moreover, the difference between the aggregate bids and the aggregate of the low bids, which was $12,918, was more than compensated for by the advantages of employing the contractors then on the work.

"In addition, their bids were not accepted as such, but were merely used as top limits of cost. In no event were the contractors to be paid more than the actual cost plus a percentage; and this percentage was reduced from 20 per cent to 15 per cent. Any savings under the limit of cost would accrue to the city, while the city was protected against any over-run.

"Throughout the entire work no low bidder was rejected except for what seemed good reasons to this department and to others responsible to the taxpayers.

"Even so, under the entire $1,850,000 devoted to construction, the total difference between all low bids on all contracts, and all the bids accepted, was only 1 per cent of all the moneys expended."

Delight Faints After She Sprains Ankle

CHAPTER XXXIX.

"You told me once, recently, that modern times and modern trend had made you frightened of marriage. Need it, really? There are unhappy marriages. We all know that, Heaven knows they get enough publicity. But the happy ones aren't bruited about on the streets, just because they are happy," Lorry was saying to Mary Lou, as Delight was listening.

"There must be hundreds, thousands of them. I spent a very happy childhood with parents who were not only deeply in love and beautifully mated, but who were splendid friends to each other and to me. Perhaps such a childhood makes a person optimistic. Anyway I am. I'd like you to think of that. I have said over and over that I don't want to force you to a decision, but all the time I seem to be trying to, unconsciously. I'm willing to wait, you know that, for as long as it takes you to make up that mind of yours. But I can't wait in absolute silence, you know, because I love you so much. Finding you was coming out of darkness into the light.

Delight Sees Pair

"If I lose you, it will be my own fault. If I lose you I'll try to be game about it. I mean I promise you honestly that all you've done for me won't be wasted, if you cannot care enough for me to become my wife in reality. I won't slip back into the madness and uselessness in which you found me again. I owe you that much; to keep on keeping on, no matter what happens, no matter if the sun drops out of my heaven. I love you," he said. "Delight."

Listening, Delight Harford felt her throat swell and her eyes sting with unusual tears. This was not the boy she had known, eager, ardent, restless; yet it was the boy, come to manhood, his eagerness conscious of its goals, his ardor graver, deeper, his recklessness gone, perhaps forever. This was a man she did not know, a man she would like to know, a man upon whom she had a certain claim.

She did not hear Mary Lou's reply, her eyes were dimmed with the rush of blood, pumping furiously through her heart. She took a cautious step forward, skirted the hedge to a place where the close-woven branches were thinner, pushed them gently aside with her hands and tried to look through. Succeeding, she saw Mary Lou's face, small, rather piteous in expression. She saw Lorrimer in profile.

He had grown much handsomer with the years, she thought, watching him, feeling old, forgotten memories sweeping back on her with a tremendous force. He had grown amazingly attractive. There was a strength about him.

He was not for her.

No, he belonged to this girl, who had redeemed him from his own particular hell, whose small cool hands and wise friendly eyes had led him back to earth and sanity. He belonged to her who loved him, and who was ready to make a sacrifice for him, the extent of which he would never guess; who had deceived him so that he might reach happiness, and who was ready to give him up so that happiness would be founded on something which she fancied real.

But it would not be real.

Loving Mary Lou Thurston as she was, he could never come to love Delight Harford as she had become. Never.

Delight went back to the little path in the woods, hesitated there. She'd return to town, and wait. When Mary Lou came to her, whatever had been decided, she would tell her she had changed her mind. She would tell her a number of things; and then she would leave New York without Lorrimer's ever having known she had been there. Mary Lou could do as she thought best about what, eventually, she would have to tell him when the real truth had to be told.

Faints After Mishap

Comfort, ease, luxury! She turned her back on them all, a rather gallant woman, a woman who knew her own limitations, a woman who realized her own soul and of what she was capable. That she was not capable of being to this man what Mary Lou was to him, she was fully and bitterly aware.

She turned and walked away. She was blinded by tears. She put up her hand to brush them away. She caught her ridiculous spike-heeled shoe on a hidden, wandering root and fell to the ground, heavily, twisting her ankle painfully, and lay there a moment, wondering frantically what she would do. She got to her hands and knees and managed to stand upright, but the hurt ankle betrayed her and flung her again. She sat holding it in her hands, sobbing under her breath, regarding the damage to her stocking with the practical regret of the woman who has few stockings and cannot afford to tear them. How would she get back to the station, she thought, dully. And she couldn't go on tomorrow night; she couldn't dance; she couldn't even walk.

She was dizzy with pain and sick with it. She had eaten nothing for breakfast; she had been out until almost dawn. Lack of food and lack of sleep, her long unaccustomed walk in the sun, the agony of her rapidly swelling ankle told on her now. She gave a short sob, which was half a groan, and fainted.

"What was that?" asked Lorrimer sharply.

"I don't know. It sounded," said Mary Lou, "like someone falling."

But Mary Lou's big police dog puppy, which had followed them into the boxwood garden, made no reply, being very busy on his own concerns, by now, a good quarter of a mile away.

Find Injured Girl

"Funny," said Lorrimer. "Sometimes we get a visitation of tramps in spring and fall if the wall-gate is left open. Suppose I go and see."

He started to his feet and Mary Lou with him.

"No. I'm as curious as you," she said, trying to lengthen her steps to his long stride. "Curiosity killed a cat, you know. I've often wondered what it was that she was so anxious to know!"

"The sound came from this direction," said Lorrimer, whose hearing was acute, and accurate.

But keen as were his aviator's eyes, again accustomed to scanning the sky and the miniature map-relief of distant earth, they were not as alert as Mary Lou's. She ran ahead of him and, even before she dropped on her knees beside the still figure of Delight Harford, she knew a sickening premonition. The incoherent thoughts raced through her brain, in that instant recognition. "Why did she come? Why break her word? What shall I say? What can I do?"

She had a wild desire to cry out, to shriek out to him: "Go back! Don't come near us. Don't look!"

But he had come up, was saying in amazement:

"Why it's a woman!"

Mary Lou, in one last, and of course futile, effort, was concealing the pale face with an outflung arm.

"Get help, Lorry," she said. "No—see if your mother can come."

DAILY TRUE STORY — Almost a Scandal

THE OVERLOOK

Four young ladies, a widow, three matrons and an asthmatic old man stopped rocking in their chairs on the great veranda and stared down the pebbled driveway.

Mr. Davis, proprietor of this quiet and somewhat exclusive summer hotel, came down the steps, followed by Tom, the porter and boy-of-all-work.

Ten pairs of eyes were focused on the man who got out of the station wagon, 10 heads turned and 10 bodies twisted in their rocking chairs in order to watch the man as he came up, crossed the veranda and entered the house.

"Bet you he's a dud," Cora Hanson whispered to Zeena Gorman.

"Not so hot," Zeena agreed.

"Nice age, not too young," the sprightly Widow Ricker murmured to Mrs. Phelps.

Mrs. Phelps agreed.

"Wonder what his business is?" queried asthmatic old Mr. Dunwoodie.

"You should have stopped him and asked him," Cora Hanson called out, shrilly.

"But we can't cuss like the old birds," Zeena whispered to Cora, whose sharp laughter caused Willa Vaughn to look up from her book with a slight frown of annoyance.

Willa was like that. Her eyes had not been among the 10 pairs to follow the new arrival's every movement. Willa was rather quiet. She didn't mingle with the younger folks and was merely polite to the others, although considerate of the older people at the summer hotel. She had come up there to rest.

Examines Register

Her idea of resting was taking little walks alone, watching the rapids in the river or the clouds in the sky, reading entertaining books or just sitting idly in the sun.

The other young people didn't mix with her to any extent. The girls voted her a "flat tire." The boys said that she had no pep.

Zeena Gorman got up and went over to the wicker table, to get a magazine ostensibly. Her real errand was to see if the new arrival had gone upstairs. He had. Zeena sauntered inside and over to the desk for a look at the register where the ink was scarcely dry.

The name was J. W. Chester. The "town" was New York. Mr. Chester, Zeena observed, had the so-called "suite" on the second floor of the north wing. This consisted of living room, chamber and bath and was, to Zeena's knowledge, the best quarters in the hotel.

"Who is he?" the Widow Ricker asked in a sibilant whisper that carried far.

"Who is who?" Zeena asked, crossly, sore because the widow made it apparent to all what she had done.

"Did you," the widow asked, sweetly, "walk in to the register and back just for the hike?"

There was a shout of laughter. Zeena could have slapped the pert and pretty young widow.

"No one in particular. The name is Chester, from little old New York. I'll leave it to you to find out whether he is married, what he eats and whether he is a shoe clerk or a man milliner," Zeena answered, crossly.

"Chester?" Mrs. Ricker overlooked the sarcasm in her eagerness. "By any chance is his name J. Warrington Chester?"

"I didn't notice," Zeena lied, but she almost jumped when Mrs. Ricker asked this. "J. W." might mean "J. Warrington." And if this man was the J. Warrington Chester, Zeena had her work cut out for her.

Women Surprised

J. Warrington Chester was a name to conjure with. He was eccentric, to be sure. But a man with millions who was one of the biggest shots in the real social world, who hobnobbed with "Dave," King George's little boy, and had his name oftener in the society columns than a New York judge gets his in the scandal and graft news, has a right to be eccentric.

"As if J. Warrington Chester would come to this place," Cora Hanson cried. "He owns a dozen summer homes bigger than this dump!"

Mrs. Ricker got up and went in to take a look at the register. She gave a little start when she saw the initials. "J. W." could mean "J. Warrington." Moreover, the man looked quite like pictures in the rotogravures of this famous and wealthy society man.

"He's a broker, or something," the little widow said, carelessly, as she came out. Like Zeena Gorman, Mrs. Ricker was convinced that the man was the real "J. Warrington Chester." Also like Zeena, she hoped no one would guess it, so she would have a better opportunity to make herself interesting to him.

More than that, when his dinner was taken up to him Ollie, the waitress, reported, when questioned, that he had an awful lot of books and papers heaped up.

Pretty little Widow Ricker was up early the next morning, sitting where she could see the dining room entrance. She had on her most attractive morning frock and she was bathed, cold creamed, powdered and rouged into youthful radiance.

Five minutes after the little widow was seated at this vantage point, Zeena Gorman came down. She was also in her most fetching sport clothes and made up as an innocent, baby-like, little trusting maid of 16—if any such ever existed. She looked daggers at the widow, who smiled calmly at her.

They looked down the walk to the sun dial in the sunken garden. Mr. Chester was coming up the path with a girl!

About noon, an hour before luncheon, Mr. Chester and Willa, who had returned and was reading by herself in a corner of the garden, set out together.

They returned about sunset time. Willa disappeared that evening. Mr. Chester went to his rooms. Part of the time he was on his balcony smoking.

Zeena and the widow held a little conference, their seventh that day. Both were now certain that this man was the genuine and original season's catch, J. Warrington Chester.

"We'll be up at daylight tomorrow and head her off," Zeena said. The widow agreed.

But in the morning it was raining—steadily, drearily.

Willa had finished her breakfast and was leaving when Mr. Chester entered. He stopped her and they conversed in low voices. If ears could be stretched, those of Zeena and the widow would have been 10 feet longer during this talk.

It was nearly noon when Zeena rushed to inform the widow that she had seen Willa coming out of Mr. Chester's room.

Protest to Owner

"We'll catch them," the widow said, grimly.

After luncheon they saw Willa go back to his room. They crept up and listened.

"Fade 'em — Wham!" Mr. Chester said.

Willa laughed. "Also," she said, "roll hot—roll me money. Five an' two an' let 'em ride!"

Zeena and the widow reported to Mrs. Davis, the proprietor's wife, two minutes later that Willa was not only much less than 10 better than she should be, but was in Mr. Chester's room shooting crap with him.

"She will have to go today, at once," said the widow, "or we go. We are used to respectable places."

"I'm sorry you two have to go," Mrs. Davis said. "You see, Mr. Chester writes novels under the name of Warren Chester. He is dictating to her. It is quite all right."

"You gave them permission—permission for—for that?" yelled the widow.

"Why not?" Mrs. Davis asked, calmly, "they're old sweethearts. They walked down to the village yesterday and were married!"

Figures Don't Lie, But—

Duquesne Light Company Never Valued by Public Service Commission.

The discovery that the Duquesne Light Company places a valuation on its property for tax purposes of only $49,000,000 while it claims a value of $149,000,000 when talking about rates with the Public Service Commission is sufficiently amusing in itself, but it brings to mind another highly important fact about the light company.

The Public Service Commission has never taken the trouble to value the property of this company which supplies all of Pittsburgh's electricity. No one really knows how much the properties are worth, although this figure is the basis upon which the company's scale of charges is supposed to be established under the law.

There are many ways of computing the value of such an extensive organization as the Duquesne Light Company. A satisfactory answer to the question would be very difficult to get, but a valuation, imperfect as it may be, offers the only way to determine whether or not the company is dealing fairly with Pittsburghers.

The Pennsylvania laws do not require the Public Service Commission to value all utility properties, but they give that body the right to make valuations and to start rate cases on its own initiative. Without the help of engineering studies it would be impossible to say whether the power company's charges are reasonable or not.

The surprising thing about the history of the Public Service Commission is that it has hardly ever taken advantage of its power to initiate inquiries into rates. It has only taken action when compelled to do so by a user of the service. The Public Service Commission, handling its job properly, should do more than sit back and wait for complaints. It should take advantage of its police powers and make sure that the utilities are charging only a fair price for their services.

Appraisal May Come

Commissioner Armstrong Reported Ready to Look Into Wabash Sale of Traffic Route.

County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong, it is announced, will move to have the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board select an appraiser to investigate and report on Wabash properties virtually accepted by the county. These are the railroad bridge across the Monongahela, tunnel under Mt. Washington, with right of way in the downtown district and South Hills to provide a new vehicular artery to the latter district.

Commissioner McGovern, after originally agreeing to the proposal of sale, later had some misgivings as to the extent of property to be transferred downtown, suggesting an independent appraisal, which was not accepted by Commissioners Armstrong and Babcock. Evidently the chairman of the board has come around to the minority view.

This is prudent. Expenditure of $3,000,000 for property rights alone, which would call for an additional large sum for improvement, is something that calls for deliberation. There is no suspicion on the part of the public that this may prove a pig in a poke, but there is no sense in proceeding blindly when there is an easy way to do it with both eyes open.

Musmanno Bill Urged

Bar Committee and Labor Body Support Measure for Property Guards.

A significant development is the recommendation of the bill in Legislature for the repeal of the present industrial police law and passage of the Musmanno bill for the creation of property guards instead, by the judiciary general committee of the Allegheny County Bar Association. The Musmanno bill also has the indorsement of the State Federation of Labor.

Meanwhile, reports from Harrisburg state that conferences are being held by Gov. Pinchot which are expected to result in changes in what is known as the administration bill covering the same subject.

Straws in the wind indicate the ending of the industrial police system as we now know it. What is to take its place rests with the legislators, and they know full well that they cannot face their constituents with alibis in this important matter.

Unemployment Relief

Total of $3,000,000 Required to Make Full Pittsburgh Plan Workable.

The Pittsburgh Plan for relieving unemployment has shown such admirable results that it is deserving of full support. While a fund of $3,000,000 is needed to put the program for employment stabilization into successful operation, subscriptions to date amount to only $750,000. A campaign to make up the balance will be conducted from April 6 to April 20. It is to be hoped that sufficient funds will be found available to make the plan fully effective.

The plan has already received nation-wide attention because it eliminates the unfavorable results of doles and the ordinary types of charity by actually creating new employment.

In many cases the more common forms of charitable relief are indispensable, but any system which avoids the pauperization of able-bodied men is preferable.

The President of the University of Pittsburgh announced that the Cathedral of Learning would be ready for classes at the beginning of the next term.

Ships That Pass On

By Nelson Harding

The castaway can hardly blame
The ships that pass him in the night,
But finds it hard to understand
Why ships pass on in broad daylight.

When rescue is imperative
How can those vessels callously
Sail on past signals of distress,
Ignoring human misery?

Working for France

Germans Know That War Isn't Profitable, So Do OTHERS.

99 MEN TEST THE STRENGTH OF AN AIRPLANE'S WINGS

In the language of the learned Solly Wertheim, "Bei'm Krieg ist nichts zu gewinnen," which means, "In war nothing is to be won."

The great airship above, one of the Rohrbach-Romar planes, having the strength of its wings tested by 99 men standing upon them, is made in Germany for delivery to France, and France doesn't pay a cent for it. You see a ship of the same make in the lower picture in full flight.

Why does Germany make this magnificent airship, test it so carefully and deliver it to France, charging nothing for it.

Because France won the war, with the help of Italy, England, Russia, the United States.

Making airplanes and turning them over to France free of charge is part of the indemnity that Germany pays. In addition to paying many hundreds of millions in gold under the Young Plan, Germany makes machinery, mines coal, gives both without charge.

A "ROHRBACH-ROMAR" IN FLIGHT

Even this nation, which went in at the last minute and came out soon after, must now spend billions upon billions in pensions, bonuses and in caring for those sent abroad that can no longer take care of themselves, endless billions for bonds and bond interest.

If the war had lasted two or three years more, with the United States in it, this country would be bankrupt.

The depression teaches us that we are paying our share.

War doesn't pay. Rich men know it.

Rich men rule the world now as kings did once. And probably the rich men will do what they can to stop wars that no longer pay.

POETRY IN MATHEMATICS

By Archibald Henderson

Roger Bacon, and centuries later, Francis Bacon, play important roles in the history of science. They are supposed, and rightly, to have formulated into a sort of system of philosophy the methods employed by Pythagoras. Theory, experiment, demonstration: What could be simpler or more natural? But this method of testing everything out is running into grave difficulties nowadays. We cannot get inside an atom; we cannot travel out to an island universe, spiral nebula or globular cluster. The middle ground of science is pretty fully explored; but we are baffled at the boundaries.

Man, who has flattered himself so long upon his "conquest of Nature," has suddenly stopped slapping himself on the back and has begun to smile on the wrong side of his mouth. Nature herself has begun to take a hand in this game. Suppose Nature refuses to be conquered! It is beginning to dawn on the scientist that his technic is getting clumsy and inadequate. The mysteries of Nature are not yielding so readily to study, get only so far and then no farther. In order to progress, we must refine our technic.

Perhaps we shall be compelled to resort to a higher form of imagination than any to which we have resorted in the past. As Scott Buchanan says in his stimulating book, Poetry and Mathematics: There is something persistent in what the whimsical and uncontrollable universe of ideas does to our experience, something with which Pythagoras, Plato, Plotinus, St. Augustine, Nicolas of Cusa, Galileo, Kant, and probably Einstein would be more familiar than the modern prophets who preach the control of nature. They would have called it by different names, each appropriate to the several historical occasions on which crises similar to our own have occurred. Some would have speculated about the foundations of the universe, some about the origin of the laws of nature, some about the Incarnation, some about the spontaneity of the human imagination, others about a possible transformation formula for Euclidean and non-Euclidean geometries.

Einstein, Planck, Bohr have introduced poetry in mathematics; by imagination is the universe to be organized in highly complex ways formerly unsuspected or disbelieved. We are not able to disprove the conclusions of these poets; for the complicated organisms which they postulate, in other words imagine, "come out right." They give results we know to be true. They conform to reality. They are verified by experiment.

Can we be sure, for example, that there is no such thing as "absolute velocity?" Certainly not. Michelson and Morley devised a technic for finding absolute velocity; but their machine didn't give the expected result. The result was null. Einstein postulated, then, that absolute velocity was not only not found, but could not ever be found, and consequently did not exist. But after all, the question is not really settled. Perhaps a physicist, with a more poetic, a more imaginative mind, will devise a more refined technic, and ultimately determine absolute velocity.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Often, during these broken, Lenten days, I think of Him . . . that strange young man called Jesus.

Hard to think of him as a man—we've buried the man so deep in religious ritual. And yet—to them He was a man. A carpenter. Handy at putting up a kitchen shelf. Gentle and dreamy—kind to children, and the sick and old. Yet very stubborn.

Stubborn about that thing He called "The Truth."

Why couldn't He be satisfied with the truth the others taught? Why couldn't He let well enough alone—make a good living, marry some nice girl, and settle down in Nazareth like other boys?

He couldn't—wouldn't. He had seen a Light. He had to spread that Light, no matter what it cost. Men did not veil the law in those harsh days. There was the Hill of Skulls, for all to see. And there on crosses, black against the sky, spiked men hung screaming through the hollow night. Or rotted, slowly, through hot, buzzing days.

He must have passed that hill with other boys. Gazed with young, curious horror at those screaming men. Asked what they did. Been told, they'd sneered at Rome. Or schemed against the power of the priests. They killed for little in Jerusalem.

He must have known the cost. Yet He went on. He who loved life went on, unflinching—straight to death.

He did love life. He loved the sunny fields—the murmuring beach—the quiet walks beneath the olive trees. He loved to gossip with the fishermen, to share a simple supper with a friend, to laugh with neighbors at a wedding feast. He loved to rest, think and sleep beneath the stars—and wake with morning shining on His face.

He loved it all. And when His hour came, He prayed "the cup might pass"—prayed with such pain His sweat was stained with blood—

Yet never—even then—would He turn back—

NO MATTER WHAT TRUTH COST, IT WAS WORTH WHILE—TO CHRIST.

The words that tell about His death are terrible. To die, like that, when one is only 33—

To feel His body breaking—

See the skies go dark—

Hear voices failing—like an ebbing tide—

Hang blind and helpless, listening for death—

To die like that is terrible, at thirty-three—

So terrible, we've shuddered for two thousand years—

And yet—

TO HIM IT WAS WORTH WHILE!

He'd seen the truth! Above all pain and pettiness, He had found the Truth! And Truth had made life glorious and free. Truth had brought riches—though He was so poor. And kingly power—though He was so weak. And filled with rich adventure that short trail that led from Joseph's bench to Calvary.

A life like that was worth all that it cost.

The men who die for Truth do not need tears. The men who live for Truth have known joy and pride, freedom and peace beyond all reckoning. Death is a little price to pay for life like that.

Just Before Dawn

Just before dawn the wind grew still
That all night long had raged.
And with the lull a sense of calm
My fears assuaged.

It was as though light, yet unseen,
Had flashed its promise on,
Revealing to my doubts and dreads
The coming dawn;

A promise of bright days to be,
When those dark hours would seem
No more than the dim shadow-shapes
Of some vexed dream.

Just before dawning, courage flowed
Into my soul again.
And the blest tides of peace crept in
That will remain.

For nevermore will hope's bright ranks
Be from my heart withdrawn;
That hour is memory's amulet,
Just before dawn.

The High Cost of Vanity

The most expensive thing that we carry around with us is our ego—sometimes known as our vanity, and sometimes as our self-esteem.

* * *

We spend thousands of dollars for the sake of vanity, that we should not think of squandering on mere comfort. That's why our luxuries are so much more necessary than our necessities.

When one kind of man receives a blow to his pride or his ego he goes out and buys a few drinks and hunts up a blonde to flatter him and bolster up his morale.

* * *

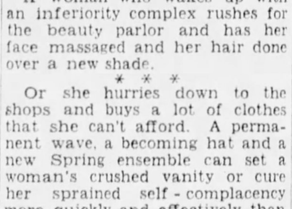
Another sort of man orders his wife a box of orchids or buys her a new car, and goes home and lets the family put him in tune with himself and back on his pedestal.

* * *

A woman who wakes up with an inferiority complex rushes for the beauty parlor and has her face massaged and her hair done over a new shade.

* * *

Or she hurries down to the shops and buys a lot of clothes that she can't afford. A permanent wave, a becoming hat and a new Spring ensemble can set a woman's crushed vanity or cure her sprained self-complacency more quickly and effectively than prayer or religion.



Many a woman has a closet-shelf piled with hats which are monuments to her dead inferiority complexes.

* * *

A few people can work off their inferiority complexes by braggadocio. By doubling their salaries and halving their failures, they manage to work up a big supply of self-assurance. Others call themselves cynics and get a big thrill of self-satisfaction by sneering at everybody else. Nothing makes a man so shine (in his own eyes) by comparison as a good hearty sneer at his fellow-men.

* * *

When you meet a man (or woman) who lives simply, dresses carelessly or plainly, never poses, never boasts, never sneers and never tries to impress you, you have met one whose ego is either so completely submerged or so firmly entrenched that you couldn't hurt it if you aimed a machine gun at it.

* * *

But, for most of us, vanity and the ego are tormenting tyrants which keep us forever swinging between the Seventh Heaven and the Place of Torment.

NEW YORK, March 30.—Diary of a modern Pepys: Up and a note from Gene Tunney in far away Egypt and on his way to Russia. Then came photographers who not only blew out all the fuses, burnt a hole in the carpet, set a lamp shade in flames, but asked me to smile.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

There are certain men in official positions who are not disposed to keep an ear to the ground and find out the layman's opinion of ideas.

These "official" officials are pretty much saturated with their own importance.

They have chosen or appointed to do a given thing and won't take suggestions from anyone.

Everything must be talked over in official session.

And having talked much and long they are too weary after to get up steam enough to carry out what has been suggested in meeting.

Then when the constituent or the common outsider who needs help that prompt action might give, gets up and shows by his talk, publicly and otherwise, that he has about as good grasp of the situation as the officials, they become irritated.

They are good talkers—they have a job and they want to keep it.

They are afraid to hit too close to the bull's eye the first time because the committee might get to functioning too fast.

They want to be known as profound thinkers and they want to keep that job and as long as they can keep dissatisfied murmurs down, they are sure of it.

CANAL NECESSARY TO PROSPERITY OF DISTRICT

TRADE REVIVAL SEEN HINGING ON PROJECT

Saving of $7,000,000 in Area's Transportation Rates Yearly Indicated

By HOWARD L. BROWNING, JR.

The Lake Erie and Ohio River Canal was first proposed by George Washington, about 1784, as a stimulus for commerce between the infant West and the parent East. Today it stands on its own feet as a necessity to the continued prosperity of a matured industrial district, the greatest in the world.

Washington saw the canal-to-the lakes project rounded by a canal through the Cumberland Gap to Virginia, as the means of knitting East and West together. Only an easy path for commerce, he wrote, could insure their unity.

Today Pittsburgh district is linked with the East and the West by the great steel tentacles of railroads, by smooth-flowing water highways, by invisible air lines and white ribbons of concrete road.

As it is physically joined inseparably with the rest of the country, so is its industrial and social welfare one of the mainsprings of the industrial and social welfare of the United States. It is axiomatic that there is work in Pittsburgh when there is no work elsewhere.

RESOURCES GREAT

Pittsburgh district has the equipment to manufacture iron and steel for the framework of the nation's progress. It has the coal fields from which comes the fuel for the nation's furnaces. It has the money to finance new expansion, the strong men to reach out to the ends of new rainbows.

But the Southern coal fields have found a way to transport coal by rail to the Great Lakes cheaper than Pittsburgh, nearer the market. Pittsburgh has found the gathering of raw materials, the distribution of finished materials, expensive. Mills nearer the markets or handy to cheap rail or water transportation have sprung up, taking from the district the trade which is its life-blood.

Between 1830 and 1840 a canal from Lake Erie existed and flourished. It was outgrown by the service it served.

Ph[illegible] f SIDETRACKED

Andrew Carnegie became interested in a modern canal in 1879. Prospect of low rail rates distracted his attention. Again in the next decade, in 1895, and in 1905, spasmodic efforts were made toward carrying a waterway to Lake Erie. The building of a railroad, in one instance, the panic of 1907, in the other, interrupted the work.

A little more than 15 years ago the real push was commenced. Today, at last, the canal seems near reality.

A saving of nearly $7,000,000 a year, in transportation rates for this district alone, has been indicated. Fifty-three million tons, more than the capacity of the canal, are in sight for movement over the canal from this district, comprising Western Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Eastern Ohio.

A cost of $101,000,000 has been set for the work. The expenditure of this sum would revive our coal fields, with the millions of dollars investment they represent, choked, as they now are, by unequal freight rates.

CHEAPER ORE

It would bring ore to Youngstown and Pittsburgh and Wheeling far below the existing freight rates. It would bring new industries, new warehouses and distributing resources to the district.

The expenditure of this money would double the traffic on the Ohio and Monongahela rivers; it would provide a short, safe route to the sea for cities up and down the Ohio and Mississippi.

Movement of munitions in wartime, relieving congested rail traffic, would be facilitated by the proposed ditch. Pittsburgh would continue to expand in its logical place as industrial leader of the nation.

The 3,000,000 persons in this district would find steadier employment. They would have more money for automobiles, food, homes, clothing. With greater resources and prosperity, their social and political environment would quicken. Industry outside of the district would benefit, directly by cheaper transportation, indirectly by sales to an increasingly prosperous district.

CITY LAKE PORT

Pittsburgh would be a lake port, connected directly with the great inland network of lakes which has so stimulated the growth of America's Middle-West. With the development of the St. Lawrence River to the sea, Pittsburgh would become a seaport, shipping with but one transfer direct to the sea, at minimum cost. Foreign competition could be met with greater advantage. Pittsburgh commodities offered at lower cost to the purchaser.

It is with these facts and many others in mind that Pittsburgh district industrial and business leaders are pleading for an outlet to the Great Lakes.

On the foresight and wisdom of the leaders of this generation they are confident depends the prosperity and greatness of the Pittsburgh district of the future with which will be linked, more and more closely, the growth of the United States.

ROUTE OF THE LAKE-RIVER CANAL

THE CANAL ROUTE AND VARIOUS WATERSHEDS OF SUPPLY

SEES BENEFIT IN CHANNEL

By J. ROY TANNER,
President Pittsburgh Valve, Foundry and Construction Company.

The rapid increase in tonnage and diversity of the products of industry carried over internal waterways has demonstrated the value and economy of this method of transportation for heavy tonnages of large volume. The addition of the Lake Erie and Ohio River Canal will, when correlated with other transportation systems, make possible further economies in transportation, one of the great items in the nation's budget.

It is not alone in such commodities as iron and coal that convenience and savings lie, but also in making possible the shipment of fabricated items beyond the size limitations for railroad shipment. Naturally this applies only to shipments to points on or close to the waterways.

The plant of the Pittsburgh Valve, Foundry and Construction Company is located on the Allegheny River and barge shipments can be loaded from it. On several occasions large pipe bends and very long runs of pipe were made completely in the plant and shipped to sites on the river. In one instance where the work could be handled by a derrick boat and placed in its final location for bolting up, thousands of dollars were saved to the purchaser in addition to a very valuable advance in the completion of the date of installation.

ESTEP FAVORS EARLY START

By CONGRESSMAN HARRY A. ESTEP,
Thirty-fifth District, Pennsylvania.

The proposed Lake Erie and Ohio River waterway should be constructed at the earliest possible moment.

The future industrial expansion and prosperity of the great Pittsburgh district, comprising Western Pennsylvania, Eastern Ohio and Northern West Virginia, necessitates this development. However, it is not a local project. It is national in scope by reason of the economic effect it will have on the nation as a whole.

Mr. Estep

European competition is rapidly becoming keen, especially along the Atlantic, Gulf and Pacific coasts, and all indications are that it will increase. Water transportation will do much to solve this problem, and this waterway would be a vital link in the great chain of inland waterways advocated by President Hoover.

SHOWS CANAL ADVANTAGES

By LT. COL. J. P. LEAF
Rochester (Pa.) City Engineer.

Let us inquire where we are in constructing a canal between Rochester and Ashtabula.

In view of the increased prosperity in the Pittsburgh district, due to slackwatering the Monongahela, Allegheny and Ohio rivers, what will follow these improvements by extending the system and building the canal?

What advantage will accrue to lake cities to have cheap water transportation to food-consuming districts along the canal?

What effect will a thorough inland waterway system from New York harbor to New Orleans and out to the Gulf have on seaboard cities?

Would it be acceptable to ore-producing states to get their ore to the large consuming valleys in this district at a more reasonable rate, receiving a return cargo of coal at 25 to 40 cents less per ton?

What advantages would it be for consumers of iron and steel products along the lakes to have from 50 to 80 cents per ton chopped from their freight rate on their vast purchases?

MONONGAHELA TO BENEFIT BY CANAL

River Tonnage, Now Equal To Panama's, Would be Enlarged by Waterways

By JAMES A. BAUBIE

Look to the Monongahela River. It rivals the famous rivers of the world in the potential wealth along its banks. Its waters each year carry a tonnage equal to that passing through the Panama Canal.

The Lake Erie and Ohio River Canal will increase this tonnage and the effectiveness of the riverways of Pennsylvania and Ohio.

Forty miles of great steel mills, wire and pipe mills, coal terminals and general industrial development stretch along its course in an almost unbroken line. It is here that the industrial heart of our nation pounds the beat of prosperity for the whole country. It is the steel center of the world.

BARGES NUMEROUS

Coming down the Monongahela from Brownsville, the first thing that impresses the traveler is the great number of barges loaded with coal, puffing down stream to feed the ever-hungry furnaces of our steel mills.

This parade of barges is still more impressive when one learns that a tow (usually six barges lashed together in front of a towboat) carries the equivalent of 120 railroad gondolas, an unusually long freight train. Only after viewing this parade, is it possible to realize that more than 22,000,000 tons of coal are borne down the Monongahela each year.

The coal men are the Monongahela's greatest users and they stand ready to extend this use to the Lakes Canal. Col. Jarvis J. Bain, U. S. district engineer, recently remarked:

"The rivers are here. All you have to do is use them. Once you start a tow of barges down the river, or up, you need have no fear of losing it or having it delayed. It may travel slower than the railroad, but it travels steadily."

DEVELOPMENT NEEDED

Pittsburgh today is a great city chiefly because her waterways gave her the natural advantages necessary for industrial and commercial development. Those who have the interest of this district at heart realize that the waterways must be developed if our industrial future is to be as bright as the past.

What the Monongahela and Ohio have done for the southern parts of Ohio and Pennsylvania, the Lakes Canal can do for the northern. Together they can assure the future of both states.

WHEAT FOR PITTSBURGH?

LOADING WHEAT INTO LAKE BOATS, BARGES . . IT'S NOT OIL

Loading wheat and other grain for water transportation, perhaps for Pittsburgh, a new distributing point, when the Lake Erie-Ohio River Canal is completed. Wheat could be shipped to Pittsburgh from the fields or from Ashtabula, Buffalo or Cleveland.

BOARD NAMED BY PINCHOT

Swinging into the active stride of promotion which advocates of the Lake Erie Canal have taken in the Pittsburgh district, in the last 18 months, Gov. Gifford Pinchot appointed a new Ohio River and Lake Erie Canal Board, March 11.

Mr. Purnell

It will be devoted to promoting construction of the canal by the federal government. Charles C. McGovern, W. Y. English, A. W. Dann, A. B. Shepherd, John B. Eichenauer and W. B. Rodgers, all of Pittsburgh, and Frank Purnell, of Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company, composed the board.

JERSEY CANAL PROPOSAL

TRENTON, N. J., March 30.—Congress would be memorialized by a resolution introduced in the Legislature by Senator Clifford R. Powell, of Burlington, to construct the proposed New Jersey ship canal from Bordentown to Morgan, Raritan Bay.

The resolution points out that New Jersey is ready to furnish the right of way and that construction of the canal is desirable to complete an inland waterway system along the entire length of the Atlantic coast.

RIVER SHIPPERS WOULD SPEND MILLIONS

Lake-to-River Project Necessitates Changing Of Existing Equipment

Steel mills and other shippers on the proposed Lake Erie-Ohio River Waterway will spend millions of dollars for new loading, unloading and material handling equipment when the canal is completed.

While most of the steel mills have dock and unloading facilities for coal, entirely new equipment on a gigantic scale must be built to unload ore and limestone to be brought to mills by barge over the new waterway. At present the mills are receiving these materials by rail. It will be necessary to either abandon or rebuild most of these existing facilities in order to make use of the new improvement.

CHANGE JUSTIFIED

While these expenditures will run into large sums of money, traffic managers state that there is no doubt about their being entirely justified by the savings in freight to be realized.

Dock facilities on Lake Erie must also be rebuilt. At present these are used to unload ore from lake steamers and to load this on to railroad cars. Facilities are also used for the transfer of coal in the opposite direction.

CENTER ACTIVITIES

Lake steamers will not be able to use the canal so that a transfer of ore to barges will be necessary. In many cases entirely new handling equipment will have to be installed to meet this modification.

The construction of the canal will also be responsible for a concentration of ore and coal handling facilities at the mouth of the waterway near Ashtabula.

At present the transfer of cargoes from lake vessels to railroads takes place at several points on the lake. Naturally these activities will have to be centered at the mouth of the waterway.

Canal Would Bring Cairo Near New York

Cairo, Ill., at the fork of the Ohio and Mississippi rivers, is 16.3 days, 1,962 miles from New York City. By way of the proposed Ohio River to Lake Erie Canal by way of the Beaver and Mahoning valleys, Cairo would be but 16 days, 1,681 miles from New York.

Endorses Canal

COCHRAN STANDLEY

Cheap water transportation will be the saving of the Pittsburgh district, according to Cochran Standley, manager of the W. E. Standley Company, sole distributors of Ideal matches in the United States. The benefits of this proposed waterway will, he believes, extend far beyond the field of those actually using the canal. The barber, the corner grocer and the druggist will reap the rewards, along with the steel and iron, the coal and food products manufacturer. Standley says he is studying ways of economically shipping foodstuffs and Ideal matches by water. With the building of the through canal from Lake Erie, he expects to work economies in operation which he can pass on to the ultimate consumer.—(Adv.)

Where Rental Buys Service---

A most important feature about living in Schenley Apartments is that the check which pays your rent also purchases a household service of such scope and detail as to become a definite part of your mode of living.

And the system by which these attendants look after the comforts and conveniences of tenants makes possible many important economies. It instantly becomes apparent to everyone making a personal inspection of Schenley service that it could not be matched elsewhere without duplication of the physical plant. Consider these features:

The service system employing 125 attendants—

Schenley Apartments is a large, exclusive and important community in itself; maintaining its own expansive garage beneath the gardened court; with fine shops, supplying all household necessities, responding to house phones—these including delicatessen, restaurant and coffee shop—and with high type hotel service dovetailing with the specific apartment service.

The rental office will point out to you how these service provisions, which assure the maximum of living comforts, also guarantee numerous important economies.

FREIGHT COSTS BIG FACTOR IN INDUSTRY

WATER RATES CUT STEEL COST

Barge Transportation Aids Local Industry Compete For Western Markets

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

The recent development of the Pittsburgh district has been a story of a struggle for markets. The major factors in gaining or losing markets have been operating and freight costs.

Water transportation has been one of the principal influences in lowering steel production costs by reducing the expense of bringing raw materials to plants in this district. It has played an outstanding part in the struggle for markets by reducing the costs of shipping Pittsburgh's products to customers.

Most industrial sections are at the mercy of the Interstate Commerce Commission and the railroads. Freight rates can make or break an industry dependent on only one form of transportation. But Pittsburgh has found relief from unsatisfactory freight charges in obtaining some of its raw materials and in shipping its finished products.

LOW COST COAL

The rivers have made it possible for the steel companies to bring coal from mines on the upper Monongahela at a low cost. They have placed this district in a position to fight for markets in the West and Southwest. Low cost barge transportation has enabled Pittsburgh's mills to compete with Birmingham and Chicago throughout the Mississippi Valley and to reach into the West by using combinations of rail and water systems.

With the completion of the canalization of the Ohio River, the steel industry has been supplied with year-round navigation of the natural river systems. But this gives the district outlet by water to only a few of its markets and provides for water shipment of only one of its principal raw materials.

Three important bulk products are necessary for steel production. These are iron ore, coal and limestone. Coal is now moving to the mills by water but more must still be hauled by rail from the lakes and a large share of the limestone is obtainable only from rail points.

The proposed Lake Erie-Ohio River Waterway would give the Pittsburgh district a new saving in operating costs by making it possible to move ore from the lakes to mills entirely by barge. Limestone also can be brought in by the same route.

TWO-WAY TRAFFIC

The project will make Pittsburgh's steel mills entirely independent of the railroads for raw materials. The extent of the possible savings from the use of water transportation for the hauling of these bulk products has already been demonstrated by the large tonnages of coal being moved on the rivers. The canal will also give the Pittsburgh district a new avenue of transportation for finished products.

The fact that the same barges which haul ore from lake ports to Pittsburgh would be able to return loaded with coal will make the cost of transporting both products exceptionally low. On nearly every other inland waterway haul, barges must return empty. The canal will be one of the few waterways which will enjoy a two-way movement of traffic which can utilize the same equipment and which can move at the same time of year.

Cement Company Operates Boats

CHICAGO, March 30.—Officials of the Marquette Cement Manufacturing Company, who recently shipped 2,200 tons of cement from their plant at LaSalle, Ill., on the Illinois River in four barges to St. Louis, averaging a speed of six and a half miles an hour, have announced that they intend, as a result of the success of this shipment, to continue to operate their own fleet.

Industries to Be Affected by Lake-River Canal

INLAND LINES EXTENDED

Interstate Commerce Commission authorized Inland Waterways Corporation to inaugurate barge line operation on the Illinois River between Joliet and its junction with the Mississippi River and in this connection required railroads to join with the corporation establishing through routes and joint rates.

Extension of the barge line operations was authorized over vigorous objections of railroads, who pointed out that their facilities are adequate to handle present and future traffic.

Order directs interested carriers to enter into negotiations with Inland Waterways Corporation for the purpose of establishing equitable divisions of joint rates by July 1, on which date order is effective.

Operation will apply over routes of the Inland Waterways Corporation between the Illinois River points of Joliet, La Salle, Peoria, Pekin and Havana on the one hand and the ports of St. Louis, Mo.; East St. Louis, Ill.; Memphis, Tenn.; Helena, Ark.; Vicksburg, Miss.; Baton Rouge and New Orleans, La.; Cairo, Ill., and Mobile, Ala., on the other hand.

River Lines Lodge Railroad Complaint

WASHINGTON, March 30.—Federal barge lines have filed complaint with Interstate Commerce Commission against railroads alleging as discriminatory and in violation of Interstate Commerce Act, refusal of railroads to permit application of proportional rates to through shipments handled by the rail and water lines. Railroads limit application of the proportional rates to through routes having an all-rail haul.

Water carrier argues that this limitation prevents the development of through routes between the railroads and the barge lines.

The Lake Erie-Ohio River Canal will make striking savings in miles in water transportation, for example, to Liverpool, England. Consider this table:

| From— | Via Canal Miles. | Via Mississippi Miles. |

BEAVER AIDED BY RIVER

Beaver County owes its position as third largest manufacturing county in the state to the improvement of the Ohio River, according to Frank T. Dindinger. The government, he says, spent $8,000,000 on the river and the industries spent approximately $1,000,000,000 in the county. More than the total amount expended by the government on the rivers, $10,000,000, goes yearly from this district to the railroads as freight rates.

PINCHOT URGES CANAL BUILDING

By GOV. GIFFORD PINCHOT

My interest and belief in water transportation dates from the time of Roosevelt in Washington. I am confident that water transportation will play an increasing part in the prosperity of the future and I am keenly interested in doing what I can to hasten the coming of that time.

BEAVER TO GIVE BIG TONNAGE

Beaver and other towns along the Beaver River are expected to contribute about 1,000,000 tons of freight to the canal each year. This tonnage, according to the Chamber of Commerce of Beaver Valley, will consist largely of steel and steel products, although glass, bathroom fixtures and other products will furnish large shipments. Inbound tonnage is expected to double the amount.

Industrial firms in this district, the chamber says, have long felt the weight of unequal and excessive freight rates.

CANAL TO LAKE LONG URGED BY DAVIS

Half-Way Measures Must Not Be Tolerated in Project, Senator Says

By SENATOR JAMES J. DAVIS

The linking of Pittsburgh with the Great Lakes by means of an inland waterway is a project I long have urged and advocated. Undeniably it is to Pittsburgh's advantage to be situated at the junction of three rivers which afford access in as many directions to natural resources and to a market.

In any movement to provide an all-waterway avenue, guarantees should be obtained of full completion of that project which is found to be most practical from an engineering standpoint and beneficial from an economic standpoint to the metropolis of Western Pennsylvania. Half-way measures would thwart realization of the objectives.

Senator Davis

In this contention I believe I am voicing the opinion of a majority of Pennsylvanians who are loyal to the commonwealth's economic and industrial position, which none of us wants impaired. It is this spirit which has typified the steady progress of the Keystone State from inefficiency to its full-grown power as a national industrial center.

Waterway to Be Wide Enough for 2 Boats

A canal must be wide enough at surface and bottom to allow two boats to pass each other safely, according to engineers. One and one-half feet greater depth than the greatest draught of vessels plying the water is the depth rule-of-thumb. The proposed canal to the lake will be 140 feet wide in the canal proper and the Mahoning River, 400 feet wide in the Beaver River, 13½ feet deep throughout.

Reservoir Bill To Come Up In Spring

The Pymatuning reservoir bill, which is at the headwaters of the Shenango River, is up for passage by the Pennsylvania Legislature this spring. It would be built by the state primarily for flood and drought control along the Shenango. However, it is planned to use it also for the proposed canal.

It would have a capacity of 18,000,000,000 cubic feet, 13,000,000,000 cubic feet of which would be available for the canal. The Shenango River, according to Col. Robert Isham Randolph, needs only 8,000,000,000 cubic feet of water in a year, three of which would come from an auxiliary reservoir in Pymatuning Creek.

River Equipment Worth $100,000,000

United States engineers estimate that boats, barges, wharfs, docks and unloading devices which have been constructed by Ohio river cities, railroads and private shippers total more than $100,000,000 in value.

AID PROMISED BY KENDALL

By CONGRESSMAN S. A. KENDALL

Twenty-fourth District Pennsylvania.

I desire to congratulate the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph on its proposed movement advocating the Lake Erie-Ohio River Canal project. Cheap and adequate transportation is the life-blood of business and, in this period of unemployment, Congress should do everything within its power to stimulate the development of the great resources of Western Pennsylvania, by furnishing adequate canal facilities so that the products of the great industrial center of Pennsylvania may be carried to all the markets of the world.

I heartily indorse this movement and will do everything within my power to urge Congress to build the canal. In my judgement, it will be the greatest work Congress can do.

CONGRESSMAN URGES UNITY ON CANAL

'Dead End' Waterway Would Benefit Pittsburgh But Little, Erk Declares

Urging unity and strong co-operation between districts affected, Congressman Edmund F. Erk, of the Thirty-second District, advocates the through canal to Lake Erie by way of the Beaver Valley, rather than the so-called "dead-end" section to Youngstown.

Pittsburgh will benefit but little from the part-way proposition, Erk states, all the districts along the route, however, will benefit alike if the entire canal is constructed as a unit.

Mr. Erk

With all the preliminary engineering necessary and other works and studies complete, Erk says that it only remains for the War Department and Congress to authorize the route and provide funds in the annual rivers and harbors bill. The Army engineers may then undertake the work in its proper sequence.

Favorable action by the War Department and Congress, with executive sanction would at once clear the way for construction according to Erk. In a statement he said:

"Now is the time for the leading industrial interests all along the proposed route to put their shoulders to the wheel and urge upon Congress the adoption of this project as a part of the great national waterways system. It would be a serious mistake to ask for the construction of only a portion of the project. The effort to obtain authorization from Congress for the canalization of the Beaver, Mahoning and Shenango rivers ahead of authorization for the complete project is not necessary, in my opinion, and it might result in the whole job never being finished.

"EDUCATION NEEDED

"I believe Congress will authorize the complete waterway connection to the lakes and provide the funds in the annual rivers and harbors bill, if interested districts make a sufficient effort to educate the members to the vast economic importance of this waterway facility to the country at large.

"The proposed route was selected by the United States engineers from three or four suggested routes as being the best, the shortest, the lowest grade and the most productive of freight.

"It is to be hoped that the industrial and business interests in the territory traversed by this route will join hands in urging Congress to adopt measures for the complete waterway connection as an authorized project, for I believe that its completion would be of immense benefit to all districts. I am certain that it would greatly increase industrial development and employment along the Ohio and Allegheny valleys."

CANAL ASSURED, FESS SAYS

By SENATOR SIMEON D. FESS

A water route from the lake to the river is inevitable in time, as I see it. There are at least three routes mentioned, all of which have had more or less attention in surveys. While I look upon the construction as a consummation to be carried out in the indefinite future, I am not inclined to comment upon any particular route at this time, notwithstanding my conviction that the Beaver River route has superior lines of argument.

RIVER TRAFFIC HEAVY

A grand total of 38,423,876 tons of traffic originated on the three rivers during 1930. Of this 25,032,265 tons originated on the Monongahela River, 10,529,320 tons on the Ohio River, and 2,862,291 tons on the Allegheny River.

Coal was by far the leading product handled. On the Monongahela River alone 20,637,510 tons were originated, while the Ohio River accountad for 5,042,728 tons, and the Allegheny River 1,109,760.

Next in line came steel products, 1,138,950 tons of which originated on the Monongahela and 1,236,906 tons on the Ohio.

CONTACT GROUP PREPARED TO GIVE HELP

Committee, Outgrowth of Meeting Called by Rae, Has Sent Congress Facts

By JAMES RAE
President, Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce.

Following rpeated visits of large groups of industrial and business leaders to Washington and other cities to attend hearings on the proposed Lake Erie-Ohio River Canal, it became apparent that a compact group should be formed which could be brought together at a moment's notice for consideration of matters arising suddenly.

We had gone to St. Louis to the Mississippi Valley Association meeting last fall and, later, to Washington, to the National Rivers and Harbors Congress with large and impressive delegations.

Mr. Dann

While we accomplished much to the benefit of the project, we felt that it was asking too much of men, vitally concerned with their own business problems, to get together so often at personal sacrifice.

With this in mind, I called a meeting of representative Pittsburghers in the Chamber of Commerce last December. The outcome of this meeting was the naming, by Chairman Alex W. Dann, of representative men from Pittsburgh, the Beaver Valley and the Youngstown districts, on a committee to be known as the Chamber of Commerce contact committee.

READY TO HELP

The committee has already caused to be issued and sent to congressmen and senators of the tri-state district a comparison of facts and figures assembled in briefs on the canal and presented to federal authorities in recent years.

We are prepared to consult with any authorities, have facts and figures constantly on hand and are planning to do everything in our power to help push the project through to its ultimate completion.

Canal Held Essential For Competition

By HENRY A. ROEMER
President Sharon Steel Hoop Company.

If industry in the Mahoning and Shenango valleys is to retain the position of importance which it now occupies, it will be necessary for this district to be placed in position to compete with other large and growing industrial centers, both with respect to labor rates and as to cost of assembling raw materials and distributing finished products.

At the present time there are producing centers which have advantages in transportation charges not enjoyed by the greater Youngstown district. This applies particularly to river and lake front cities, where freight rates for water transportation are much lower than rail rates applying to inland cities.

This is exceedingly important to the steel industry where heavy tonnages are involved, and unless something can be done to place the steel producing units of this district on a basis of cost competitive with other producing centers which have lower transportation charges, the future development and prosperity of this great industrial region will be seriously threatened.

Therefore, I believe that the proposed Lake Erie and Ohio River Canal project should be rushed to completion as rapidly as possible.

TAXES JUSTIFY PROJECT

The tristate district lying at the south end of the proposed Lake Erie-Ohio River Canal is estimated to pay more than $200,000,000 a year to the United States Treasury in the form of federal taxes. Proponents of the project claim it is only just that the district should benefit by the expenditure, over five years, of $101,000,000 on the canal.

While the size of this tax contribution justifies the building of the canal, in the estimation of many, they point out that the entire country would benefit, not only from the increased prosperity of this district but from the use distant states would make of the canal.

BOWMAN SEES EARLY ACTION

By CONGRESSMAN FRANK L. BOWMAN,
Second District, West Virginia.

The Lake Erie-Ohio River Canal project has had my serious attention and study for some time. While it overshadows by far most every other project yet accomplished, it nevertheless is linked up with the same enthusiasm which in the beginning accomplished other improvements.

Mr. Bowman

The United States Congress directed the board of engineers of the Rivers and Harbors division, War Department, to make a careful survey of different routes for this connection between the Ohio and Lake Erie. It had been hoped that the report would be submitted in time for congressional action during the last session, but there was a question at the last moment from the Ohio interests, and later from Pittsburgh, which extended the board's consideration and made it impossible to get the report before the House in time for the committee hearings and passage.

This will leave sufficient time during the summer to complete the survey and present the entire proposition to Congress in December, when I confidently believe that immediate and definite action will be taken.

Barge Builders Fill Large Orders

Companies building steel barges are enjoying a large volume of business in spite of the general economic depression. The American Barge Company and the Riter Conley Works are constructing a total of 20 barges of the 300-foot type, while the Midland Barge Company and the Marietta Manufacturing Company are building 500 barges of the 232-foot type.

FORD PLANNING BARGE USE

Immediate use of the Lakes-to-Gulf waterway after its completion, opening an all-water route from Chicago to New Orleans, is planned by manufacturers located along the Great Lakes.

The Ford Motor Company is having plans drawn for double-deck barges to deliver automobiles assembled in the Ford plant in Chicago to cities along the Illinois and Mississippi Rivers. These barges will be 300 feet long, 40 feet wide and will have a capacity for carrying 300 automobiles.

The Ford Company receives its silica sand from pits at Ottawa, Ill., on the Illinois River, which is being moved by rail to Chicago and transferred in bottoms for delivery at Detroit. According to plans being outlined, this commodity will be loaded in barges and transported through the Illinois River to Lake Michigan and there loaded on lake boats for shipment to the plant at Detroit.

RIVER TO LAKE ROUTE NO. 1 HELD BEST

Sheet and Tube Manager Sees Waterway by Beaver, Mahoning Most Beneficial

By H. S. WARWICK
Manager, Industrial Department, Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company.

It is interesting to note that a drawing of the four proposed through routes from the Ohio River to Lake Erie across Ohio, as prepared by Prof. C. E. Sherman, of Ohio State University, and that the analyses of facts and figures on these routes as compiled by the Board of Army Engineers in 1922, show that Route No. 1, via the Beaver and Mahoning rivers to Niles and thence by canal to Ashtabula, is the shortest in distance, would be the cheapest to construct, would have the greatest capacity and, according to the board, would offer better possibilities for a justifiable waterway than any of the others.

Benjamin Schwartz, director general of the Institute of Scrap Iron and Steel, Inc., recognized spokesman for the scrap iron industry, has said:

"The river-to-the-lake project would draw upon the potential source of more than 3,000,000 tons of scrap from the lake district.

SOURCE OF SCRAP

"The rivers project would have as a potential source approximately 1,000,000 tons of scrap in the South contiguous to the Mississippi River. It is estimated that at least 90 per cent of the scrap used by the steel mills in the tri-river valleys must be purchased in other markets because the production of scrap in that territory is comparatively insignificant.

"The best interests of the scrap iron industry and of the steel mills would be served by the development of waterway transportation which, together with the facilities of the railroads, particularly for short haul traffic to the waterways, will assure wider markets for scrap and the continuous collection and unhampered distribution of this material."

AID TO COAL TRADE

Conditional upon rates, service and shipping facilities, it has been estimated by the firms in the tri-valley area that for the rivers' end of the proposed through waterway, there will be annually about 10,000,000 tons of inbound coking coal and about 4,500,000 tons of inbound steam and domestic coal which probably would be transported via water at a large saving over present transportation costs.

CANALIZATION MEANS INDUSTRIAL EXPANSION

THE COMPLETION of the Lake Erie-Ohio River canalization project means continuous expansion of industry in the vast Pittsburgh-Mahoning Valley districts. It means lower raw materials costs. It means lower finished product cost. It provides a new low-cost avenue for the distribution of the products of this area to the world. It is a logical economic improvement of the greatest import in this age of keen competition.

J. & L. to Add Equipment Costing $20,000,000 If Canal Is Constructed

New equipment in towboats, barges, lake and river terminals costing more than $20,000,000 would be bought or built by Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation in event of construction of the proposed Lake Erie and Ohio River canal, according to official estimates.

Total shipments through the canal, to and from the corporation's Pittsburgh district plants would reach the 6,000,000-tons-per-year mark within a short time, it is stated.

Officials state that expenditures which would be made would be justified in a short time by savings in carrying costs. Where possible, it is thought, the money would be spent in the tri-state district.

DOUBLE USE

Iron ore would be brought from the corporation's mines in the Northwest, limestone, dolomite and general supplies would be carried over the waterway. To the North would go finished steel products and coal from company mines to company ships and ore mines on the lakes.

Under Vice President A. B. Shepherd, Jones & Laughlin has taken leadership among industrial organizations sponsoring development of internal waterways and use of them by industry.

History of the J. & L. navy goes back to the acquisition of the twin-screw barge Parana, in 1864. It was used to bring iron ore from Brunot's Island and the Youghiogheny River, and limestone from the Monongahela River to the Eliza blast furnace.

FLEET GROWS

With the opening of the company's river mines in 1890, extensive use of the rivers was started. Additional towboats and barges were added year by year, to bring coal to Pittsburgh and, later, to Aliquippa.

Steel products first went on the rivers in 1921. In October of that year the first shipment of six steel barges with 4,000 tons of steel products passed down the Ohio. In April, 1930, the famous "Century Tow," the hundredth tow of J. & L. steel products on the rivers, left for the South and Southwest. Tows now leave regularly, twice each month.

The corporation's equipment now totals 12 towboats, 221 steel barges, ways, loading docks, wreckers, involving millions of dollars' expenditure. The company's fleet carries 5,000,000 tons of coal each year and more than [illegible] of finished products [illegible] at Cincinnati, New Orleans.

OIL INDUSTRY INCREASES FLEETS

Leading Companies to Use Water Transportation to Greater Extent in Future

A new industry has discovered the advantages of low cost water transportation within recent years. Gasoline is being hauled in large volume on the rivers at present and plans of the leading refining companies indicate a substantial increase in this class of traffic in the near future.

Standard Oil Company of Pennsylvania, a subsidiary of Standard Oil of New Jersey, brings a major share of its gasoline into the Pittsburgh district by water. The Gulf Oil Corporation is making river transportation an important phase of its $60,000,000 improvement plan to increase production and sales in Ohio and Western Pennsylvania.

River transportation facilities have been installed at the new refinery on Neville Island, and additional docks have been provided at other strategical points along the rivers.

Gulf Oil is constructing a large fleet of all-steel barges, especially designed for carrying gasoline, and plans to greatly extend its river activities in the future.

Gulf officials state that their use of water transportation would be further increased by the construction of the Lake Erie and Ohio River waterway.

ROAD FAVORS RIVER LINES

A new era of river-rail transportation may be indicated by the action of the Chicago and Eastern Illinois Railroad which is cooperating with the barge lines of the Ohio and Mississippi rivers and definitely plans to develop river-rail business. J. B. Ford, vice president of the road, says:

"We are going to continue to co-operate with the barge lines and develop river-rail business in every way we can. Our willingness to co-operate is evidenced by the fact that we place no obstacle in the way of the barge lines and that we have established joint rates and through routes, not only with the Federal Barge Line at Cairo, but with the Mississippi Valley Barge Line and the American Barge Line at Jappa, Ill., and Evansville, on the Ohio.

"I believe river-rail business will grow, as I say, but that the development will be slow due to the extremely hard times and to the period of adjustment necessary to the inauguration of any new transportation medium."

Early Project Mentioned by Washington

When George Washington surveyed this district for a canal route from Virginia to Lake Erie, he feared he would be unable to obtain Pennsylvania's permission and help for that part of the route lying in her boundaries. He clearly saw that Pennsylvania would be loathe to see trade from the state flowing into Virginia. In 1784 he wrote in his diary:

"Any attempt of that government to restrain it, I am equally well persuaded, would cause a separation of their territory, there being sensible men among them who have it in contemplation at this moment."

LINE OPERATES LARGE BARGES

Three of the largest steel towboats in service on the rivers are operated by the Union Barge Line Corporation. The line also operates one of the most complete fleets of barges in the inland waterways service.

The Union Barge Line gives towboat service to some of the most important industrial organizations in this district. It operates two tows a month between Pittsburgh and Memphis.

Among the organizations served by the line are Pittsburgh Steel Company, McKeesport Tin Plate Company, Weirton Steel Company, Wheeling Steel Company, Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation and Atlantic Refining Company.

Through an affiliation with the Dravo Contracting Company, the Union Barge Line also has access to all the special types of river equipment owned by that organization.

Canal Project Recalls Old Warning

The Old World looked with some anxiety, in the late eighteenth century, at the ambitious plans of the young American republic to link itself inseparably with the settlements on the west of the Allegheny Mountain chain. Building of canals across the rivers might prevent the imperialistic plans of Spain, Britain and France. So the Spanish Council warned the United States in this manner:

"If it had pleased God that these rivers should have been navigable, He would not have wanted human assistance to make them such.

ORDERS WOULD AID DISTRICT

The Pittsburgh district will benefit materially from orders for new equipment which must be placed by shippers in order to make use of the proposed Lake Erie-Ohio River Waterway.

The estimated cost of $101,000,000 for the canal covers only the actual construction of the waterway. Millions in addition must be spent for barges, towboats and for new loading facilities. Steel mills and fabricating plants in this district will benefit from the orders for a major share of the new fleets necessary to haul more than 53,000,000 tons of traffic which, it has been estimated, will be carried by the canal each year.

Practically all of the barges and towboats built for inland waterway service in recent years have been made of steel.

The FUTURE of PITTSBURGH

The future of Pittsburgh as a manufacturing and distributing center depends largely upon the final development of its waterways, highways and airways, co-ordinated with established railways. The extension of these four transportation facilities will continue to insure this community's dominating position.

Communities are fortunate, indeed, which have available all modern facilities for transportation . . . and it is their great privilege—nay, their duty—to develop them to their utmost, so that these four great modern distributing facilities, fully co-ordinated and functioning (not in competition with each other), will furnish the ideal situation for producers and merchandisers. They will also serve to attract industries to their communities so that they may enjoy to the full extent the advantages which this transportation foursome will offer in distribution of articles of trade and commerce.

The proposed waterway connecting Pittsburgh with the Great Lakes (Lake Erie and Ohio River Canal project—Route No. 1) through the Beaver and Mahoning Rivers, across the summit to Lake Erie, is fully justified as an important development of our waterways distribution system connecting the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence system with the Ohio-Mississippi Rivers system and its many great tributaries flowing through the center of American agricultural and industrial production. The completion of this great project would develop a tonnage of river and rail traffic that would tax the ingenuity of man to handle.

President Herbert Hoover, speaking before the Rivers and Harbors Committee of Congress when he was Secretary of Commerce, said:

> "If we are to make a survey of all the opportunities of physical progress in our nation that lie before us, the development of our internal waterways would stand in the forefront. Above all, expenditure on works of this type increases the wealth of our country. It is a reproductive expenditure that increases the area of tax distribution and becomes in the end an actual economy to the Government."

Calvin Coolidge, former President of the United States, said with respect to the development of inland waterways:

> "The economic value of these streams has long been recognized, but their development has proceeded slowly. To render the highest service, as carriers and distributors, they should be joined together and standardized as to dimensions for traffic so that the shipper would have confidence in them. When they are finally brought together in a workable system, the benefits in rates and values will be incalculable."

JONES & LAUGHLIN and WATERWAYS

B. F. Jones, who founded the business in 1850, appreciating the strategic rivers location of Pittsburgh, with the Monongahela and Allegheny joining in the heart of the city to form the Ohio, and foreseeing the coming changes in transportation that would develop the city into the center of the iron industry in America, entered the then struggling iron business.

The present J & L manufacturing plants are located on seven miles of river front along the Monongahela and Ohio Rivers.

The J & L coal requirements of 5,000,000 tons per annum are transported by water from its mines in Washington and Greene Counties to its plants on the Monongahela and Ohio Rivers.

J & L was the first to institute the present system of river delivery of manufactured steel products. When the pioneer steel tow went down the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers in the fall of 1921, it was hailed all along the rivers as marking the dawn of a new era in the utilization of the inland waterways for distribution of manufactured steel products to customers in the South, Southwest and West. That forecast has come true. J & L established regular river service to customers along the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers, as well as a river and rail service to reach customers in many inland cities, and, in April, 1930, shipped its "Century Tow," which event was celebrated at all of the principal cities along the rivers.

J & L in 1927 instituted the first river railroad car ferry service on the Monongahela and Ohio Rivers, by means of which its Aliquippa and Pittsburgh Works are as effectively connected as its plants on the north and south sides of the Monongahela River.

The Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation has a full appreciation of the strategic location of Pittsburgh, utilizes the four great transportation facilities of the district, and encourages their full development.

President, Beaver, Mahoning & Shenango Rivers Improvement Association

The need of a waterway connecting the Great Lakes with the upper Ohio River system has long been apparent. Youngstown citizens and manufacturers for many years have supported it.

Such a connecting waterway would unify the two greatest waterway systems in the country and be of great benefit to both the lake district, which consumes the coal of Pennsylvania, and the river districts which use the iron ores of the Northwest.

Mr. Bray

From a national point of view, construction of such a connecting waterway seems inevitable.

REPORTED SUPERIOR

In 1921 a special board of Army engineers reported that Route No. 1—Beaver to Ashtabula—offered better possibilities for a justifiable waterway than any other.

Among other facts given, they reported that it presented the best prospects of obtaining the greatest tonnage of bulk freight, would traverse a territory of "highest freight rates," that it was the shortest route, cheapest to construct, and the one of greatest potential capacity by reason of water supply.

These conditions have not changed during the past 10 years. The use of Monongahela and other river coals, the growth of steel plants along the proposed waterway, the increasing trend to the manufacture of open hearth steel, involving the use of large quantities of scrap, have all intensified the advantages of Route No. 1 over all others.

COST JUSTIFIED

It has been estimated that the saving by water transportation on local tonnage originating in and going to and from plants on these two rivers will more than justify the cost of improvement of the Beaver and Mahoning Rivers. This would permit shipment of lake cargo coal and other through products up to Lake Erie and ore, scrap and other through products down to the Ohio which would be more than sufficient to amply justify the canal part of the project.

Early in 1930, at a public hearing in the office of the chief of Army engineers at Washington, a brief was presented by Youngstown interests supporting the canal and showing that the potential contribution of tonnage based on 1929 operations by the cities on the Beaver and Mahoning Rivers along the canal route would be about 14,000,000 tons of coal, limestone and miscellaneous products, plus about 5,000,000 tons of iron ore. These figures were principally from actual statistics from plants on the two rivers. There is no doubt that all plants would quickly adjust themselves to use river transportation to the fullest extent.

CONDITIONS SIMILAR

It may be pointed out that, so far as the character of tonnage goes, traffic conditions in the Mahoning Valley are similar to those in the Monongahela Valley.

The Monongahela tonnage has grown largely in the last 10 years on account of high post-war freight rates, the development of by-product coke ovens permitting the use of river coals for making blast furnace coke and the improvement of the three rivers serving Pittsburgh.

CANAL FAVORED BY CAMPBELL

By CONGRESSMAN GUY E. CAMPBELL,

Chairman House Committee on Enrolled Bills.

I have been convinced for many years that the greatest boon and aid to Pittsburgh in maintaining its position as the outstanding industrial city of our country was by the construction of a waterway to Lake Erie. At this time, I am more fully confirmed in my opinion that it is the one thing that is essential to the future growth and industrial welfare of the Pittsburgh district.

Mr. Campbell

I have sponsored legislation in Congress providing for the construction of a canal from the Ohio River to Lake Erie for the past 10 years. Its economical soundness is most apparent to those conversant with the enormous tonnage in our district. Its feasibility has been passed upon by eminent engineers in civil life, as well as by the Corps of Engineers of the U. S. Army. I hope to see the project undertaken ere I retire from Congress.

City Well Able To Take Care Of Traffic

Pittsburgh is already equipped to handle efficiently all the traffic which will pour into this district and leave by way of the Lake Erie and Ohio River Canal, according to the Propeller Club. More than 125 privately owned river docks are in service. Three railroads are constructing river-rail terminals. The city of Pittsburgh is constructing a river-rail terminal.

Planning to Build Oil Burning Boat

A scarcity of motive power which has developed on the river has been responsible for plans of Capt. Walter Halfhill, owner of the tow boat Reliance, to build a 400 horsepower oil burning tow boat.

CANAL ASSISTS CITY'S GROWTH

The greatness of New York City is credited by historians to the construction of the Erie Canal by Gov. DeWitt Clinton. The Erie Canal diverted trade from the West which would have gone overland from the lakes to Philadelphia and Baltimore. Cities and towns sprang up along its banks and New York State was united by it forever.

The cities and towns along the Beaver, Mahoning and Shenango Rivers are credited to the Ohio River-Lake Erie towpath canal, built between 1831 and 1833, which operated successfully for nearly 40 years. Like development throughout the entire tri-state river district is expected to continue with the building of the modern Lake Erie-Ohio River route.

Diesel Barges May Be Used on Canal

The Erie and St. Lawrence Corporation is operating barges self-propelled by Diesel engines over the New York State Barge Canal. They are 254 feet long, 36 feet wide, draw 9 feet 7 inches of water, have a capacity of approximately 1,500 tons. They have been found practical for long lake hauls, and probably will be used on the projected Lake Erie-Ohio River Canal.

Drop in Estimated Waterway Cost Seen

No recent authoritative estimate has been made of the cost of building the Lake Erie-Ohio River Canal. A decided drop in construction prices is looked to by some, however, to bring the cost down 10 or 20 millions of dollars.

Coal Along Rivers To Last 400 Years

Pittsburgh district coal beds and fields along the Monongahela and Allegheny rivers have enough coal to last, according to prospective needs, for 400 years. There is a large quantity of iron ore available. This probably will be extensively developed with the development of new mining and smelting methods, in the future.

Lake Season Would Allow for Repairs

The Lake Erie-Ohio River Canal would be in operation, engineers say, but eight or nine months of the year, depending upon the lake season. This would allow a period for repairs and readjustments on the plant, forestalling breakdowns in summer.

Expect Operating Costs to Be Lower

Costs of operation on the Lake Erie-Ohio River Canal are expected to fall far under similar costs on the Monongahela River. The canal would be in operation only eight or nine months of the year. It would carry, however, more than twice the tonnage that passes over the river in 12 months, it is estimated.

Dredging Expected To Be at Minimum

Dredging is expected to be at a minimum in the canal to the Lake. Tributaries of the channel flowing mostly over bed-rock, will carry little silt into the project, it is said. This will cut one of the greatest expenses of canal operation, that of dredging the channel.

Appreciating the Inestimable Value of the Lake Erie and Ohio River Canal to the Shippers of the Pittsburgh District, We Are Glad to Publish Our Endorsement of This Project.

NEW WATERWAY TO AID COAL OPERATORS

Western Pennsylvania Leaders Want Access To Youngstown Field

Since the war coal operators in Western Pennsylvania have been waging an uphill fight to retain markets against the competition of other operators in West Virginia and Kentucky. While labor and other influences have played an important part in the struggle, freight rates have been major factors. Coal is a low priced bulk commodity with a narrow margin of profit. The matter of a few cents a ton in freight means the difference between profit and loss in serving highly competitive markets.

For years the leading coal producers in this district have been trying to get cheaper access to the large market for coal in Youngstown. The Pittsburgh Coal Company was so anxious for relief from high freight rates that it bought the Pittsburgh, Lisbon and Western Railroad and asked the Interstate Commerce Commission for permission to make extensions to the line which would develop it into a through route from Smiths Ferry on the Ohio River to Youngstown. The coal company planned to ship its product by barge down the Ohio to Smiths Ferry and to transfer to its railroad at that point. It was expected that a sufficient saving would be available under the existing all-rail freight rates.

ELIMINATES COST

The Interstate Commerce Commission opposed the plan, but ordered the other railroads in the territory to provide the needed service. This is being done with the construction of rail-river terminals at several points on the Ohio River. The coal men, however, still feel that the freight rates for the rail portion of the trip are excessively high.

The proposed waterway would entirely solve the problem by making it possible to ship coal from the Pittsburgh district all the way to Youngstown without any transfer from barges to railroad cars.

Leaders in the coal industry are of the opinion that the unsatisfactory freight differentials between this district and West Virginia in serving Youngstown consumers will be entirely overcome by the Lake Erie-Ohio River Waterway.

COL. C. W. KUTZ

Col. Kutz, U. S. A., retired, who in 1925 filed a brief with the Board of Army Engineers, admitting the Lake Erie-Ohio River Canal was without engineering difficulty but calling it economically inadvisable. His report was influenced, it is understood, by expectation of lower freight rail rates to the lakes.

Probable Tonnage To Be 53,411,000

Latest authoritative estimates of probable tonnage which will pass over the proposed Lake Erie-Ohio River Canal set a figure of approximately 53,411,000 tons yearly. This is more than the estimated actual capacity of the project. Pittsburgh to Wheeling districts, inclusive, are expected to supply, in gathering or distributing materials, 39,390,000 tons. The Beaver, Mahoning and Shenango districts are expected to supply 14,021,000 tons a year.

Board Suggested Counties Contribute

The Lake Erie and Ohio River Canal Board suggested to the late Gov. Martin G. Brumbaugh in 1917 that money for the canal be raised by subscription from the counties affected. Estimated cost, at that time, was $64,625,400. Fifty-eight counties were to be assessed.

Movement for Waterway To Lakes Started by Washington in 1759

1905. Lake Erie and Ohio River Ship Canal Company was chartered in Ohio and Pennsylvania, intending to build a canal, if practicable. Plans were abandoned during the panic of 1907.

1910. W. A. Magee was appointed head of the Lake Erie and Ohio River Canal Association.

1911. The proposed route was inspected by members of the Rivers and Harbors Committee of the House of Representatives and by the National Waterways Commission.

1912. The National Waterways Commission approved the plan, carrying a 12-foot channel by way of the Beaver and Mahoning Rivers to Niles, O., and thence by canal to Lake Erie, about six miles from or at Ashtabula.

1917. A favorable report on the project was filed by the Canal Board, June 28, with the late Gov. Martin G. Brumbaugh, of Pennsylvania.

1920. Congress passed the transportation act of 1920.

A hearing, April 27, was held by the Committee on Rivers and Harbors on the subject of construction of the Lake Erie and Ohio River Canal and the general improvement and construction of waterways.

1921. The special board of engineers, United States War Department, reported on four proposed routes, designating that from Pittsburgh to Ashtabula by way of the Beaver and Mahoning rivers as Route No. 1, most feasible from all angles.

1925. Col. C. W. Kutz, U. S. A. E. C., filed a report in March with the board of engineers at Washington, saying Route No. 1 was feasible from an engineering standpoint, economically inadvisable.

Col. Robert Isham Randolph, waterways engineer, filed an appeal for the Canal Board from the Kutz report in Youngstown, November 7. Estimated costs were too high, he said, estimated tonnage and benefits too low in the Kutz report.

1926. Col. Kutz filed supplemental report with the Board of U. S. Engineers, February 12.

A second hearing was held in Washington, October 16, at which Randolph filed a surrejoinder to the Kutz appeal. The matter was pigeonholed by the chief of Army engineers' office.

1930. George M. Lehman filed a second appeal from the Kutz report, February 4, at a public hearing in the office of the chief of Army engineers, Washington. Decision was postponed.

Mississippi Valley Association indorsed the project, November 26; Pittsburgh and Youngstown business leaders presented a united front in asking for approval. James Rae, Chamber of Commerce president, led the delegation of 50 Pittsburghers.

Pittsburgh delegates met with friendly reception, December 10, when they appealed to Representative Dempsey, of New York, chairman of the House Rivers and Harbors Committee, for favorable consideration of the plan.

1931. Alex W. Dann was appointed chairman of a contact committee of the Chamber of Commerce, January 10. Members of the committee, representing districts which will benefit from the proposad canal, were to meet with officials in Washington to boost the work.

The contact committee mailed a letter and 50-page booklet containing summaries of the Kutz, Randolph and Lehman briefs, to Congressmen from this district, March 5.

Gov. Gifford Pinchot appointed the present Ohio River and Lake Erie Canal Board, to promote the building of the canal by the federal government, March 11.

Canals Played Part In Nation's Rise

Development of canals and convenient transportation systems has accounted for the rise of most great nations. Long before the Christian era, Egypt, Assyria, India and China had navigation canals.

Proposed

Ohio River-Lake Erie Canal Would Tap the Beehive of American Industry

ON THE NORTH it would tap the iron ore mines and scrap supply of the Great Lakes District. On the South it would penetrate the great coal fields of Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Kentucky, the large scrap iron supply markets in the South, the important deposits of fluor spar in Illinois and Kentucky on either side of the Ohio River, and the mineral deposits of the great Southwest, as well as those in South America.

It would stimulate increased production in the important limestone mining area about Hillsville, Pa., which would border on the waterway. It would intersect the third largest iron and steel district in the United States, in which district is a steel ingot capacity greater than any foreign country except England, France and Germany; even approximating these countries by one-half to three-quarters of their present production. It is inconceivable that this area will long be deprived of waterway transportation navigation.

It would traverse the Youngstown district, noted not only for its iron and steel industry and its steel fabricating and stamping plants, but also for its great diversity in other industries such as sand, gravel, clay and pottery, stone, cement, powder, rubber, leather, brick, textiles, iron and steel foundries, electrical equipment, fire extinguishers, chemicals, signs, bronze, brass, electric welded pipe, butt and lap-welded pipe, bars, rods, shapes, sheets, wire, nails and wire products, and tin plate.

There is an estimated annual tonnage of approximately 34,000,000 tons of ore, scrap, coal and limestone consumed in converting the steel ingot capacity of this district into finished steel. All this is potential tonnage for the improved rivers and main waterway trunk. This company, which is one of the largest producers of quality steel in the world today, would be one of the largest contributors of tonnage to these proposed waterways improvements.

CHAMPION COAL

CHAMPION COAL . . . Mechanically and Automatically Cleaned

THE Pittsburgh Coal Company leads the world in modern coal preparation and sizing plants—the coal is cleaned automatically and mechanically—every ton is uniform as to size and weight. To date four huge plants have been erected, with a capacity in excess of 12,000,000 tons annually. Industry, as well as the householder, is now able to purchase coal free of rock, slate, clay and refuse, for "Champion" Coal is cleaned of all loose non-combustible material. Its use eliminates waste.

The Lake Erie and Ohio River Canal is an obvious necessity to Pittsburgh Interests and Pittsburgh Industry. It will mean larger tonnages, greater production and increased payrolls. To get behind this project, personally is a duty every citizen owes to his community.

EXPECT CANAL TO END LAKE CARGO CASE

Pittsburgh Mines Could Compete With South By Waterway Route

The proposed Lake Erie and Ohio River Canal is expected, by Pittsburgh district coal operators, to settle the famous lake cargo case, now before the Interstate Commerce Commission for the third time in six years.

The cheap transportation advantages which the water route would give Pittsburgh coal bound for the Great Lakes would equalize costs, it is said, with comparative distances. Pittsburgh would once again be enabled to serve the Great Lakes with cheap coal; the district's mines would again operate steadily; 10,000,000 tons of coal would move north each year.

It was in 1914 that Pittsburgh last shipped that amount of coal to the lakes. In 1929, little more than 5,000,000 tons was moved north. The search for a reason for the decrease brings the Lake Cargo case to the fore.

BUSINESS FALLS

Pittsburgh coal operators awakened in 1924 to the realization that shipments of coal from southern fields were steadily mounting, while this district's export rapidly fell. It was seen that fields in Kentucky and Tennessee, one, two and three hundred miles farther from the lakes than Pittsburgh, were shipping their coal to Toledo, nearest trans-shipping point, for but 9 cents more than Pittsburgh shipped to Fairport, Ashtabula, Conneaut and Cleveland.

A complaint was filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission. It was pointed out that coal from the Harlan district in Kentucky, 447 miles from Toledo, was shipped 275 miles, the difference in Harlan field's and Pittsburgh field's distance to the lakes, for 9 cents.

From the Kanawha fields in Kentucky to Toledo is 370 miles; from Pittsburgh to its lake ports averages 172 miles. From the Pocahontas fields to Toledo is 435 miles.

REJECT PLEA

The commission rejected the plea. Some said politics was the reason. Others said the Pittsburgh case was presented poorly. Still others blamed the railroads.

Some of the members had changed their minds when the case was again brought up in 1928. The justice of Pittsburgh's plea was admitted. The commission issued a statement, setting a 45-cent differential between the southern fields and the Pittsburgh field on the trip to the lake. Pittsburgh interests expected to see a reduction of that amount in their freight rate.

Rates were cut. Pittsburgh was astonished, however, to see the southern roads cutting 20 cents from the rate to Toledo. The differential stood at 25 cents instead of 45. It was shown that the commission had set the differential in a "statement," not an order. An order must be obeyed; not so a statement.

WAGES CUT

Wage cuts in the South enabled those fields to meet Pittsburgh prices and cut under them. Pittsburgh operators returned with a plea to the commission to suspend the southern cut, pending further arguments. The commission complied and the southern field faced the necessity of paying the spread.

They sought, in a southern court, an injunction against the commission, preventing it from suspending the 25-cent differential. They obtained the injunction. The Anchor Coal Company carried the case to the Supreme Court. Before the hearing date, however, the northern and southern railroads met and set a 35-cent differential, by mutual agreement. The Supreme Court decided that that settled the matter and refused to make any decision.

Once again the case is before the commission. Examiner Charles M. Bardwell is to make a report on the Pittsburgh group's claim that the 45-cent differential, which they never obtained, is not enough. They ask for an 80-cent spread with the nearest fields, a 95-cent spread with those farthest south. They point to the fact that it costs just as much, if not more, per mile for the railroads to haul coal from the South as from Pittsburgh. They ask for the differential on the basis of extra miles and equal costs. They have waived the question of greater costs.

RATES LOWER

It is shown that roads leaving Pittsburgh receive 8.5 mills for each mile each ton of coal is hauled, whereas the southern railroads only earn 4 mills a ton-mile.

Bardwell is expected to make a report by mid-summer. The commission will then hear the exceptions to the report filed by the losing side. By spring of 1932 the commission probably will have made a decision.

By that time, it is hoped, the Lake Erie to the Ohio River Canal will have been approved and work about to start. Until the completion of the canal, if the commission sets the new, higher differentials, the coal industry will once more have the advantage of its nearness to the market.

After the canal is completed, they will have a still greater reduction in transportation costs. Tonnage will go up, men who have not worked steadily for years will be back at work, between $15,000,000 and $20,000,000 more will be paid to the Pittsburgh district for coal alone each year.

PLAN TWO-WAY CANAL WOULD PAY LOADS AID DISTRICT

In 1929 the Monongahela River economically carried 28,907,614 tons of freight, according to government statistics. Most of the carriers came back to Pittsburgh empty. It is estimated that the Lake Erie-Ohio River Canal will have such balanced exchange that very few barges will pass over it empty. Transportation of empty containers will, it is authoritatively said, be far lower over the canal than over any railroad in the country. The balance is due to interchange of iron and coal and other products.

Ohio-Erie Channel Held Business Aid

The building of the Lake Erie and Ohio River Canal would widen the field of water distribution and encourage new business enterprises, and in addition act as a stimulant to business in general, J. M. Roberts, contracting engineer for the McClintic Marshall Corporation, declared. He also pointed to the fact that the canal would stimulate demand for steel barges, one of the company's important products.

The Lake Erie and Ohio River Canal is needed, leading industrialists of the Pittsburgh-Youngstown district say, to keep the steel industry centralized in this district, preventing scattering of mills through the country.

Of late years, high freight rates have caused many industrial corporations to combine with other firms in other parts of the country, with an eye to avoiding high assembling and distributing costs. Many branches have been established by existing firms, increasing the decentralization.

With the coming of the canal, it is hoped that this practice will cease. Pittsburgh's location near the source of raw materials will make local manufacturing more practicable, it is hoped, bring the district back into its own, strategically located, with cheap transportation to any part of this country and many foreign ports.

Republic Would Be Big User of Canal

With the establishment of the through canal to Lake Erie, the Republic Steel Corporation expects to launch into extensive river traffic. Republic is the largest producer of alloy steels in the country.

Canal to Require Large Barge Fleet

The operation of the proposed Lake Erie and Ohio River waterway will require about 50 tow boats and 170 barges for the handling of coal and ore alone, according to engineering estimates. This will cost nearly $10,000,000 and most of them will be built in this district and will contribute to the business prosperity of Pittsburgh.

CANAL'S TOTAL LENGTH TO BE 101 MILES

Plans Call for 25 Locks And Reservoir System to Assure Water Supply

By GEORGE M. LEHMAN
Consulting Engineer, Lake Erie and Ohio River Canal Board.

A brief engineering summary of the proposed Lake Erie and Ohio River Canal should be interesting to the public at large. Too little is known of these details.

The propoosed canal extends from the Ohio River, at Rochester, along the channel of the Beaver and Mahoning rivers, through Youngstown to Niles, O., 50.1 miles. Thence it goes due north by canal proper, 51.4 miles, joining Lake Erie in the vacinity of Ashtabula, O. The total length of the canal is 101.5 miles.

Mr. Lehman

The proposed summit level, 27 miles long, between locks 15 and 16, is to have water elevation of 900 feet. The southern portion is to be formed by an artificial lake of nine miles in length, in the Mosquito Creek Valley. Total lockage is 559 feet.

It is probable that the number of locks may be reduced. Present plans, however, call for a total of 25. The lifts vary from 10 to 30 feet. The useable lock length is 360 feet, width 56 feet and depth over sills 12 feet. Double locks are planned.

The main source of water supply will be French Creek, a tributary of the Allegheny River. The favorable topography of the country provides ample storage reservoir sites at suitable points for control of the water, and also conveniently located feeder lines leading to the canal.

The reservoir system planned will not only conserve the flood waters now going to waste and frequently causing damage, but will make possible a considerable increase in the volume of water on the streams at the time when most needed.

Army engineers and other authorities of national reputation have passed favorably on the water supply system.

HUGE RESERVOIR

The proposed Pymatuning reservoir, the chief one, will play a most important part as to storage and distribution of water with relation to canal requirements and also what is needed with regard to the Shenango River. The combined capacity of this site would measure about 18,000,000,000 cubic feet.

Cost of the entire project, as of 1925, totals $101,000,000.

RIVER PROJECT AID TO STEEL

The steel producers of the Youngstown district will benefit in three ways from the construction of the proposed Lake Erie-Ohio River Waterway. At prsent the Youngstown district lacks the advantages of the use of the rivers, which have afforded large savings to mills in the Pittsburgh district.

While the Pittsburgh district can bring its coal from the upper Monongahela River and can ship its finished products to the South by barge, the Youngstown companies are entirely dependent on railroads and have no chance to take advantage of the economies of water transportation.

The canal project will eliminate these disadvantages by opening the Mississippi and Ohio River system to the Youngstown district. Coal can move from river mines in Pennsylvania and Northern West Virginia to Youngstown and finished products can be shipped to points on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers.

Business Expansion Seen by P. L. Logan

The Logan-Gregg Hardware Company, celebrating its one hundredth anniversary this year, is looking ahead to use of the proposed Lake Erie and Ohio River Canal by way of the Beaver and Mahoning valleys for large shipments of hardware to lake cities, according to Patton Lyan Logan. Expansion which would otherwise be seriously hindered by high transportation costs, he says, will be possible with the canal open.

Rail Business Gain With Canal Likely

With the increase of use of the rivers, rail traffic and profits have mounted, it is said.

Proponents of the Lake Erie-Ohio River Canal point to this increased prosperity as the natural accompaniment of prosperity in industry.

It is claimed that the canal will help, rather than harm, existing rail transportation systems by promoting the contributing prosperity of the districts they serve.

Locks to Permit Three-Barge Tows

Plans call for building the proposed Lake Erie-Ohio River Canal wide enough, with large enough locks, to allow a tow of three barges and towboat to pass through without being broken up. This will allow transportation of about 3,000 tons each way, in average-size barges.

Early Worker

WILLIAM A. MAGEE
Mr. Magee, former Pittsburgh mayor, who headed the first Lake Erie and Ohio River Canal Board of Pennsylvania, has long been interested in the canal. Cheap water transportation means progress, he said.

GRAIN MILLING FORECAST HERE

An example of the manner in which railroads often benefit from waterway development is given by local wholesale food distributors.

They predict the establishment of grain elevators in and near Huntington, W. Va., from which flour would be shipped by rail to the sea. Grain, they say, would be brought in large quantities through the canal.

United Metal Would Extend River Use

United Iron and Metal Company reports that its use of the rivers, now limited, will be greatly increased with the completion of the proposed Lake Erie-Ohio River Canal by way of the Beaver valley, by water to the East, according to by water to the east, according to J. P. McCann.

RIVER LINE HAS JOINT RATE

Midwest shippers and manufacturers who are interested in the building up of a new inland merchant marine on the waters of the Mississippi Valley take encouragement from the fact that there appears to be the beginning of a definite co-operation between the railroads and the barge lines on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers.

The Chicago and Eastern Illinois Railroad recently announced its intention to co-operate fully with privately-owned barge lines as well as with the government-owned barge line. As a result of certain other "friendly negotiations" one privately-owned barge line, at least, is now putting in joint rates on all shipments originating in the Pittsburgh district to all points in Oklahoma, Arkansas, Louisiana and Texas.

This same barge line is able, through like negotiations, to put in rates with the Louisville and Nashville, the Illinois Central and Southern from Pittsburgh, to St. Louis and Memphis via Louisville.

These are seen as steps in the right direction by barge line interests who feel the sooner the railroads decide that their best interests for the future lie in the direction of thorough accord and co-operation with the river lines, the sooner will be realized the ideal transportation system in America envisioned by President Hoover.

States Give Much To Flood Control

Pennsylvania and Ohio together contribute more than three times as much of the money spent in flood control on the Mississippi River by the United States government than the aggregate of the six states bordering on the 1,000 miles of river between Cairo, Ill., and the Gulf, it is estimated. The estimate is made on the basis of the two states paying $339,193,727 a year in taxes, one-tenth of the total income of the government.

Canal to Offset Improvement In West

Steel mills in the Chicago district will be placed in an improved competitive condition in market in the South and Southwest with the completion of the Great Lakes to Gulf water way which consists of a canal extending from the Mississippi River to Chicago. This advantage to Chicago can be overcome as far as Pittsburgh is concerned by the construction of the Lake Erie and Ohio River Canal, which will give Pittsburgh important savings in the cost of obtaining ore.

Old Pennsylvania Canal Spanned Mountains

There are few, if any, Pittsburghers who remember the old Pennsylvania Canal between Philadelphia and Pittsburgh until 1853. It was part of the trunk system of waterways which linked the entire eastern part of the country.

The Pennsylvania Canal came west from the mouth of the Swatara, along the Juniata to Lewistown. From there barges were carried on an inclined plane railroad, operated by steam engines, over the crest to Johnstown. From Johnstown it descended to the Allegheny, crossing over a viaduct at Freeport, to Pittsburgh, entering the city by way of a second viaduct about where Eleventh street now is.

The terminal was where the Union Station now stands A cut, later filled to form a tunnel, carried the barges to the Monongahela River. The cut was built for about $60,000, it is said. At some places, it was as much as 65 feet deep.

Water Terminal Aid to Ashtabula

The effect free, easy water transportation has had on Ashtabula, the outlet of the Ohio River to Lake Erie Canal is shown by the city's freedom from indebtedness. One of the most modern rail-water terminals in the world has been constructed there, equipped to handle at any time the probable canal tonnage.

FAMED EXPERT FOR WATERWAY

Robert Isham Randolph, waterways engineer chosen in 1925 to file the appeal of the Pennsylvania Canal Board against the now-famous Kutz report, was one of five minority members of the International Board of Engineers whose report was accepted in favor of the Panama Lock Canal, against the majority report, which favored a sea-level project.

He was chief engineer for the Chicago drainage canal, was connected with the work of draining the Florida Everglades. Randolph's report is emphatically in favor of the feasibility of the canal.
